NFB OFFICERS VISIT S'SIDE

Maritime supervisor for the National Film Board, R. J. "Max" Hickey of Fredericton, N. B., accompanied by John Martin, district officer of the NFB in Charlottetown, yesterday visited Summerside to meet with J. F. Arnett, recently appointed member of the board of governors of the National Film Board, who will be attending his first meeting at the new headquarters building in Montreal later this month.

Following discussion of NFB matters yesterday, the men made an official call at the Summerside town hall where they met with Mayor W.A. Currie in his office in the civic building.

During his visit here it was learned that Mr. Hickey's father had been a native of Indian River, P.E.I.

Pickersgill's Bill Runs Into Commons Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Nicholas Mandziuk, Ukrainian-born MP, said Thursday there is no room in Canadian citizenship ranks for "Quislings and traitors" who refuse to return to Canada to stand trial on charges of treason.

The Progressive Conservative Commons member for Marquette, Man., spoke in opposition to a Liberal MP's private bill which would remove a provision in Canadian law that citizenship can be withdrawn from a naturalized Canadian who refuses to return to Canada to answer such charges.

The bill was introduced by J. W. Pickersgill (L—Bonavista-Twillingate), former citizenship minister, who urged that naturalized Canadians be given "a psychological feeling of complete equality" with native-born Canadians so far as their citizenship is concerned.

SPECIAL RIGHTS

A native Canadian who refuses to return to answer treason charges does not lose his citizenship under present Canadian law.

Debate on the proposal followed Finance Minister Fleming's disclosure of the government's main spending program for the new fiscal year starting April 1—a record $6,173,448,557 including old age pensions.

Mr. Pickersgill, whose bill would remove one of the last grounds by which citizenship of a naturalized Canadian can be revoked, said Parliament should give immigrants a feeling of equality with native-born Canadians.

The bill would allow a court to revoke citizenship obtained by fraud or misrepresentation.

Mr. Mandziuk said he does not know why there should be concern for a naturalized Canadian who loses his Canadian citizenship for refusing to return to Canada "to face the music" and answer a charge of treason.

As a matter of fact, he said, the present revocation provision should be made to apply to native-born Canadians as well.

NO RESPECT

"Thousands of Canadians have no respect for traitors," he said. "Those who come from outside (Canada) know full well it was because of Quislings and traitors that the freedom of their country (of birth) was lost."

The bill would make "very attractive propaganda" on the election hustings, but in fact came into conflict with another section of the Citizenship Act which, in certain circumstances, provided that an immigrant could lose his Canadian citizenship by staying outside Canda for 10 years. No such provision applied to a native Canadian.

A traitor, by the very fact he refuses to return, does not deserve to carry the honorable name of Canadian, Mr. Mandziuk said.

Thursday marked the second time Mr. Pickersgill has attempted to get commons support for his proposal. He tried on the final day of the last session, during debate on a government bill removing several other grounds on which citizenship of a naturalized Canadian can be revoked. His idea was voted down at that time.

Mr. Pickersgill, who was citizenship and immigration minister for three years before the 1957 defeat of the Liberal government, said Progressive Conservatives might ask why he hadn't attempted to carry out the change while in office.

NO CHANGE SUGGESTED

The reason was that the question had not arisen. No one had suggested that the change be made. But during the spring and summer of 1957 he had been told of a feeling among naturalized Canadians that their legal status was not equal and that they could lose their citizenship under circumstances which did not apply to the Canadian-born.

Grant Campbell (PC—Sotmont) interjected to suggest that feeling arose because Mr. Pickersgill, when minister, had said Canadian babies were superior to immigrants.

Mr. Pickersgill replied he had never said that. He had said that as a means of increasing population — other things being equal—the cradle was a better means than immigration because it was harder for immigrants to adapt themselves to Canadian living.

He said Mr. Campbell's interjection was "small" and asked that his bill be considered "on a high level and in a dispassionate way."

Loans Too Small

economy often ends with their completion, when the jobs they create are terminated.

How much better it would be, he said, for the government to set up loan facilities, at relatively small public cost, so that small private enterprise could finance the capital expansion and modernization essential for its survival.

MANY BENEFITS SEEN

"Vigorous expansion undertaken by such widely-separated ventures as independent retail establishments would show benefits everywhere. The local unemployed would find work without travelling to distant communities; the community payroll would increase with subsequent benefits to all residents; material would be made, shipped and sold to many parts of Canada.

"And, best of all, this flurry of capital expansion would result in improved business and a strengthening of the private enterprise and competition that are fundamental to our economy."

Small business is the backbone of the Canadian economy, the RMA general manager said, with approximately 250,000 independent enterprises recording gross sales of more than $14 billion a year.

"Yet many of these small businesses are in difficulties even though they are operated efficiently," he explained. "Times change quickly and in order to meet the competition of large chain stores and shopping plazas, they must expand and modernize their facilities.

"This takes capital, but unfortunately store buildings and equipment, goodwill and demonstrated ability are not acceptable collateral for loans. And without some form of suitable loan facilities, an enormous number of small retailers will be forced to vacate the field, leaving the retail trade to a few large corporations."

REPEAL URGED

With regard to section 34 of the Combines Investigation Act, Mr. Gilbert said that RMA's aim was to have it repealed or amended "to bring under control loss leader selling, ruthless price cutting and misrepresentation in sales and advertising."

Price-fixing was not the aim he contended, pointing out that there were sufficient manufacturers and retail outlets to ensure competitive marketing, and other legislation to prevent cartels.

Describing the evils that have developed, he said a store may advertise a ":'loss leader", a nationally-advertised product, at a price actually below the wholesale figure. They may bring a large number of shoppers who usually find that the advertised merchandise is in short supply.

There are, however, alternatives at similar prices which are far inferior in quality to the advertised bargain.

So, through the use of a loss leader, the store gains an unearned reputation as a bargain store and, while some knowledge bargain-hunters may benefit from judicious buying, others are cheated through the mistaken belief that all the goods are sold at a low mark-up.

PRESTIGE DAMAGED

Independent Retailers often do much to build up their sales and prestige, Mr. Gilbert asserted. They advertise, demonstrate and frequently service their products. A loss leader store need not enter into these activities, because the products already have been popularized by others.

This store trades on the prestige of an article and in so doing lowers its value in the eyes of the public.

Multiple outlets and reputation of their products are necessary to manufacturers and wholesalers, he added.

Loss leader selling forces many ethical retailers out of the field and deteriorates the product in the public mind, thus nullifying the manufacturer's efforts and research to improve his product and increase its prestige.

Some persons still fail to see beyond the apparent bargain price, he declared, but support for RMA's stand is growing and indications were that the government plans some action.

"But it all depends on members of the distributive trades supporting our stand and communicating with their members of Parliament to make their demands known," he said.

Heated Boxcars Prove Success

SUMMERSIDE BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

Heated boxcars loaded with Prince Edward Island potatoes have successfully passed winter tests in Montreal, the Canadian National Railways announced Thursday.

A statement issued in Montreal said the studies have established that the heated cars may prove a valuable addition in handling winter traffic.

Loaded with potatoes, two cars from Summerside arrived in Montreal where they were allowed to remain outside for a week before unloading. During the test, temperatures well below zero were encountered but the temperature inside the cars remained controlled at 40 degrees above zero.

The cars are designed to carry all perishable traffic, such as vegetables, now handled by refrigerator cars. In addition to having a greater capacity than the refrigerator cars — 52 tons of potatoes compared with 22½ tons — the new heated boxcars are much cheaper to produce.

One of the cars tested was heated by charcoal heaters under the floor which pipe fluid heat throughout the car, ensuing uniform temperatures and eliminating cold spots. Earlier tests in Northern Manitoba had shown that the cars keep a controlled temperature in winter weather as low as 40 degrees below zero.

During the shipment the potatoes were also tested for bruising in heavy loads. The cars were filled to varying heights and some of the potatoes were protected with added insulation. It was discovered that no bruising would occur in capacity loads even without the extra insulation.

S'side Concert Ass'n Plans For March Membership Drive

SUMMERSIDE — Members of the executive and membership campaign committee of the Summerside Community Concert Association met last night at the home of Mrs. D.L. Miller to prepare plans for the early spring membership campaign which will be held the week of March 2th-7th.

Lowell Hancock, president of for the meeting and introduced the association was chairman Mitchel J. Vermette, representative of the New York and Ottawa offices of Community Concerts of Canada, etc.

The Summerside association hopes to offer one or two impressive group attractions during its 1959-60 concert season. Because the problems of booking both solo artists and group attractions present problems of routing, the meeting included a discussion of attractions which were made available at the Atlantic region conference held in Moncton earlier this month.

Officials said that it was only through such long range planning that the Summerside group could make available to its members the best possible combination of attractions each season.

Officers attending last nights meeting included Mrs. David Miller, first vice-president; Mrs. Kenneth Dorsey, second vice-president and membership chairman; Dan Chan, third vice-president, and publicity chairman, Miss Jean Nicholson, secretary; T. Earle Hickey, treasurer and Gabriel Chaisson, a member of the board.

It was stated that attractions which the association plans to bring to Summerside in 1959 will be announced just prior to the membership campaign week date.

Following his discharge from the army he was employed for two years as a boiler mechanic on the MV Abegweit. He later joined the Summerside department.

Mr. Gillis resides in Traveller's Rest. He is married and has four children.
