WATCH, WATCH, MOTHER.

BY MARY A. KIDDER.
Mother, watch the little feet,
Climbing o'er the garden wall,
Bounding through the hay street,
Be happy, child, sled and ball;
Never count the moments lost,
Never count the time it cost;
Little feet will go astray—
Guide them mother, while you may.
Mother, watch the little hand
Picking berries by the way,
Making houses in the sand,
Tossing on the fragrant hay,
Never date the question ask,
"Why to me this weary task?"
These same little hands may prove
Messengers of light and love.

Mother, watch the little tongue
Prattling, eloquent and wild;
What is said and what is sung
Be happy, child, joyous child;
Catch the word while yet unspoken,
Sing the "wo" before 'tis broken!
This same tongue may yet proclaim
Messengers on a Saviour's name.
Mother, watch the little heart,
Beating soft and warm for you;
Wide some lessons now impart—
Expanding, oh, that young heart true;
Unsuspecting every word you speak;
Shining good and precious seed;
Harvest rich you then may see
Reaping for eternity.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ECONOMY IN A FAMILY.—There is nothing which goes so far towards placing young people beyond the reach of poverty, as economy in the management of their domestic affairs. It matters not, whether a man furnish little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in his kitchen, or in the parlor; it runs away where he knows not how, and that demon, waste, cries "more!" like the horse-race's daughter, until she that provides has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that none goes wrongfully out of it—not the least article, however unimportant in itself, if it establishes a precedent—not under any pretence, for it opens the door of ruin to stalk in, and he seldom leaves an opportunity unimproved. The husband's intertunity should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition carry her no further than his welfare and happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theatre of her exploits in the bosom of her family, where she may do as much towards making a fortune, as he can in the counting room or the work-shop. It is not the money earned that makes a man wealthy—it is that which he saves from his earnings. A good and prudent husband makes a deposit of the fruits of his labor with his best friend, and if that friend be not true to him, what has he to hope? If he dare not trust his wife, he cannot be the companion of his bosom, where is he to place it? A wife acts not for herself only, but she is the agent of many she loves, and she is bound to act for their good, and not her own gratification. Her husband's good is the end to which she should aim—his approval is his reward. Self gratification in dress, or indulgence in appetite, or more company than pure duty can well entertain, are equally pernicious. The first adds vanity to extravagance; the second fastens a doctor's bill to a long butcher's account; and the latter brings intemperance, the worse of all evils, in its train.

All over the Union they talk politics, more or less, just before election. In this State (New Hampshire) the whole year is taken up in discussing party merits. At one of our district schools, the children were disputing about the principles of their fathers. One said his paternal parent was a Whig, another's was a Democrat, still another a Know-Nothing. A little witch of a girl, whose father died recently, heard them so far, and then in sweet prattle stammered forth:
"The no matter about that. My father has gone to heaven, and I guess he is as good as any of them."

THE UTICA OBSERVER. has the following about advertising, to which every shrewd business man will assent:—"The true course in business is to let people know what you may desire to obtain from them. The system of advertising sits down the conditions of existing trade, as on a chart, and every one is enabled to guide his proceedings by it. Thus the exchanges of commerce are made with rapidity and satisfaction. There are ten thousand mutual wants in society which go about in search of each other. The advertising columns of the newspaper offer the ready means of bringing together the interested parties, and the medium of communication between the seller and the buyer—the source of information mutually advantageous to the business man and the consumer. The time has passed for people to sit quietly in their stores, and trust to circumstances for customers. The aspect of business has been entirely changed—the old landmarks have been removed, and new channels opened. Merchants and mechanics should not now sit quietly and gaze upon the dust gathered around their wares, but with becoming shrewdness place their pens on paper, enumerate their articles, and where they may be found. Man of small capital long since discovered this route to wealth; and he who does not follow in their wake, will find himself distanced.

DIGGING FOR MONEY.
"What are you digging for?"
"I'm digging for money."
The news told the idlers collected.
"We are told you are digging for money?"
"Well, I ain't digging for anything else."
"Have you had any luck?"
"First rate luck! pays well; you had better take hold."
All doled their coats and laid hold most vigorously for a time. After throwing out some cart loads, the question arose:
"When did you get any money last?"
"Saturday night."
"How much did you get?"
"Four dollars and a half."
"Why that's rather small."
"It's pretty well—seventy-five cents a day is the regular price for digging cellars in the town."
The spades dropped and the loafers vanished.

UNCLE OR FATHER.—"Say, boy, whose horse is that you're riding?"
"Why, it's daddy's."
"Who is your daddy?"
"Don't you know? Why, Uncle Peter Jones."
"So you're the son of your Uncle?"
"Why, yes, calculate I am. You see, dad got to be a widower, and married mother's sister, and now he's my uncle."
Ladies wear corsets from instinct—a natural love of being squeezed.
