ELLEN'S DIARY

The Harvest Moon Shines On Fields Of Ripe Grain

This evening set a bow of moon in the fading afterglow of a wooded hilltop. It was to be September's Harvest Moon.

"If we happen to get good weather now it's good news," the brain should register as well by night's approach. "At least that's what the old folks used to say."

"Would you call that a dry or wet moon?" Mack queried.

"I'll answer that when it's gone!" James replied with a twinkle. "All the same, those rainbows we've been seeing lately aren't the best sign of harvest weather!"

"Showery, I take it!" Mack nodded. "It has been, more or less."

"Showery, stamp! James agreed.

Several weeks after the actual anniversary date to enable members of the family to be at home Mrs. and Mrs. Williams were married on July 22, 1914, by Rev. George Miller of Alberton. Fashion Photo Embargo Inhibits Style 'Scouting'

PARIS (AP)—The ladies who couldn't get a glimpse of the famed fall and winter fashion collections over here finally got a look at them Sunday.

Photographers, strictly embargoes against fashion scouts, were released for press use about a month after fashion writers and buyers saw the real thing paraded by mannequins in the haute couture houses of this fashion capital.

In addition, the delay in photo publication gives foreign dress-makers an opportunity to get them into production.

The freshest wearable look seemed to be Dior's peasant skirt silhouette, called the "new look" for some. Dior's skirts are full and swaying on many of the models, with long and loose jackets or small and fitted blouses.

EYE-CATCHING STYLE

Yves Saint Laurent presented no surprises, coming out with mid-calf length dresses for dinner wear as his most eye-catching style.

Many who saw Saint Laurent's collection were amazed at the similarity

TEACHERS HONORED

Which former Montague school teacher is being honored at a surprise going away party? Both are, in fact which contributed to their confusion, Gerry Pin-half - winter as he backed into the shadow of his doorway. "Look who's here!" Tabby padded along the path from the house across the lane. She paused a moment close to, to survey her surroundings.

Was she wondering where now were the teasing wings of the swallow that had flown through her summer?

"I bedded those" we overheard James say to the younger farmer of some cow-kin in stable.

"Did you give them their grain?"

"No - not yet."

The chort was hearing an end. Presently the pair would be off to the fieldwork: the fence which continues these days.

"Let's you and me go and count panies!" Peter suggested dust mounding from the trolley which way by his older brothers and sister had come down to him.

"You like the Mondays?" he queried.

"Oh yes! In fact, we like our every day but sunny Mondays especially."

"I can see your point of view," he nodded.

A light wind from up the creek moved the washed an spread pieces gently. The sun seemed benignly. The dew had lifted from the flowers above, leaving all fresh and clean.

"Ah, ha!" he exclaimed in a stan's University, Centre in Mrs. Pinescu. Gifts were presented to both teachers.
