

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 5, 1883.

The Situation as to the Liquor Traffic

Mr. Whitman has called attention to facts which would be scandalous to Charlottetown if the traffic in strong drink were perfectly lawful, and, in defiance of the law, are lamentably disgraceful.

The situation calls for the use of the iron of the law, rather than for the Judge's irony.

Mr. Whitman denies that he censured the Stipendiary Magistrate. Perhaps he did not. It is possible that the person who epitomized his remarks for THE EXAMINER was mistaken.

It is lamentable that public opinion does not require the enforcement of the law. The Stipendiary Magistrate is, probably, less blameable than anyone else.

He has to decide on the cases brought before him, and cannot, in justice to all concerned, interfere in the prosecution of offenders. But the police officers might do so. In our opinion, they ought to do so.

Looked at from any point of view that can be adopted, the disgraceful situation in Charlottetown with respect to the violation of the law, is seen to be due to the want of a public spirit to uphold the law.

Open violations of the laws against theft, or arson, or burglary, or murder, would at once be resented by an indignant public, and prompt justice would be demanded. But the open violation of the law against the liquor traffic—the arch promoter of all crime—draws forth only an ironical comment from the seat of justice, and magistrates, officials, and people look on with the utmost indifference.

Is it any wonder that our esteemed contemporary the Herald calls for the abandonment of the Scott Act and the renewal of the license system? If this could at once be done we should at once second the motion. Anything rather than this demoralizing violation of the law with respect to the great demoralizer of the civilized world.

In the meantime, what is to be done? Will nothing be done?

Methodist Union.

Though the general feeling of the Methodist body is largely in favor of Union, and though it is admitted that the church itself will be greatly benefited and strengthened, still there is also a strong current of feeling opposed to it, which will not allow itself to be silently passed by.

A glance at the history of Methodism for a few years back will remove to a large extent any objections which may have been raised against the Basis of Union. The first Methodist union which took place in Canada, was one between the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, and the societies planted by the Wesleyan Church of Great Britain.

It was apparent to all that something had to be done. Accordingly, in 1846, a deputation was sent to England, to negotiate the restoration of the Union which had been disrupted. This deputation was, happily, successful. A Basis of Union was agreed upon; and, in 1847, these two bodies were again united.

In 1874, was consummated the great union of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Eastern British American Wesleyan body, and the new Connexion Church. Though there were fears then, as there are at the present time, in the minds of many with respect to the practical working of these amalgamated bodies, events have proved most conclusively that these fears were groundless; and we have no reason to doubt but that the benefits conferred on the Methodist denominations by former unions, will be as nothing compared with those which may be expected from the amalgamation soon to be consummated.

Concerning Appointments.

THE EXAMINER felt quite sure that the Herald would tone down considerably its remarks concerning the "ostracism of Catholics from official life;" and in the last issue, we have the admission that a correspondent who praises its first article on the subject "places too much stress on the religious aspect of the case." No doubt of it. In the making of appointments stress should not be laid upon the religious aspect of the case, except for the purpose of securing the Civil Service against infidels, atheists, and men of bad moral character.

Neither should a man be kept out of office nor appointed to office because he is a Catholic or a Protestant. The country demands fitness, and cares nothing at all about the religious views which an official may hold. The blunders committed by the Liberal-Conservative Party in making official appointments, gross, and almost inexplicable as they have been, were not in this direction, as any one may see who takes the trouble to look over the list.

While the Grits were lately in power, Catholics were, with a few favored exceptions, debarred from office; and, should jealousies concerning officeholding or any other cause, unfortunately again divide Protestants from Catholics in the political field, they will again be debarred. The unhappy time during which Catholics were under a disability in this Province should never be forgotten.

Sisters of Mercy.

Reverend Henry Ward Beecher in speaking of the recent death of a member of his congregation paid a touching tribute to the Sisters of Mercy. In describing the young man's last hours the Rev. Mr. Beecher said:—"He selected beforehand the hospital to which he was to be taken, which is under the direction of those Christian Catholic women, the Sisters of Mercy, in Pittsburgh. And so when, staggering at last he lost step and fell utterly helpless and powerless, he was borne to the bosom of their sacred love. Soon after he entered the hospital Sister Sebastian, on whose head may the Lord lay his hand warm with blessings, knowing him to be alone, and, faithful to herself, to her Saviour, and to him, sat down by his side and asked him after his spiritual welfare—whether he had been baptized, whether he had been educated in religious knowledge, whether he was prepared, should things go adversely, to meet his God, and she received answers very sweet and comforting in every respect. She took charge of him, and no care could have been more unrelenting, more tender, patient, and long continuing than that was given to him. These Sisters let me say in the fulness of thanksgiving to God, exemplify to us more than all creeds, dogmas, or organizations what it is to be Christian. They have given up the joy of founding for themselves the household with embracing children around their knees that all the store of the motherly love might be given to the children that have no home and no household, and thus they have made themselves the ministering mothers of salvation to unknown multitudes of people. It draws my heart yearner to them; for I see so much of Christ in them that, though they would repel me they shall not. They are mine because they are Christ's, and I wait to them with all my soul the blessings of God's love and my own profound thanksgiving, for that ministering care they have bestowed upon one of my flock."

Wheat Bran for Milch Cows.

It is well known that phosphorus is an essential ingredient in the formation of bone, and, indeed, the bones are the principal source of our supply of phosphorus. Wheat bran is rich phosphoric acid. Wheat contains in the whole grain 82 per cent of phosphoric acid, and corn only 3 1/2 per cent; but nearly the whole of the phosphoric acid of the grain exists in the husk or bran. Thus wheat bran contains nearly 20 per cent of this valuable substance. What percentage is in the bran of corn we have no means of ascertaining, but it is certainly less rich in phosphoric acid than wheat bran. Rye bran is richer still than wheat bran, containing over 34 per cent of phosphoric acid, which is a larger proportion than is contained in any other article for food for stock. Wheat bran is also far richer in lime than corn, and is therefore a better food for poultry than the latter. If wheat bran is preserved free from damp or mould it will not deteriorate in quality by keeping for any moderate length of time, a year for instance. Our dairy farmers and stock raisers will see by this the value of brans for feeding purposes.

Bears are reported to be a glut on the market at Pettoediac, N. B. Spring lambs are accordingly in demand. It is no uncommon sight, and one suggesting the millennial dawn, to see the gay sportive bear and the frolicsome spring lamb lie down together. For the lamb enquire within. St. John News.

The University of New Brunswick, has conferred the honorary degree of LL. D. on Hon. Wm. Elder—we take it rather in just recognition of his eminence as a journalist than for his personal political record.

CARD OF THANKS.

THE Eldon Public Hall Tea Committee desire to convey their thanks to those who so kindly patronized their tea on Wednesday last.

They are very sorry that the extremely disagreeable weather broke up all arrangements, and prevented them from carrying their plans into completion. They thought that very few (if any) of their Charlottetown friends would have left by the boat on account of the rain, and they felt that it was useless, if any did come, to bring them to the grounds, when nothing could be done to accommodate them. They trust that the weather will be more favorable on Tuesday next, when they will be prepared to accommodate all who come. July 5th, 1883.
