Let's Talk It Over

Family allowances and unemployment insurance, two comparatively recent pieces of legislation, have probably reduced the likelihood of a recession in Canada. They belong to the type called social legislation which has a leveling effect on the fortunes and misfortunes of man.

A society composed of rich and poor will probably always be with us. There is nothing abnormal about it. It seems inevitable that the social ladder will have many rungs since people are born with such widely differing capacities for getting ahead in the world. You may as well try to place Man O' War on the same plane as the old gray mare as to put all humans in the same economic bracket.

Unemployment Insurance may lend itself to certain abuses, but on the whole it is generally considered beneficial. At best, however, it is only a stop-gap measure which waits the creation of a far greater economic scheme. "Employment Assurance." The statesman who works out a plan by which all men can be given his honor and respect of all mankind.

Many Phone Calls Hamper Firemen, Police At Fires

By jamming the telephone circuits with calls of inquiry to the operator and the fire station whenever a fire alarm is sounded in Summerside, those citizens of the town are unwittingly creating a situation that completely disrupts certain parts of the telephone communication system in Summerside and prevents essential calls that frequently have to be made by or to the telephone operator, police and fire station.

Miss Clara Mountain, chief operator at the Summerside telephone exchange, in explaining the circuit problem created by inquiring telephone subscribers, said that from the moment the fire alarm is sounded, scores of people pick up their phone to try to find out where the fire is located. This in turn creates a busy signal on as many circuits.

Many of the calls are directed to the operator, who in most cases does not know where the fire is located, and these calls prevent the operator from receiving and handling normal and emergency traffic. At the police station and fire was located in or threatened their places of business. Mr. George Hogg, secretary of the fire department, said that even the firemen are unable to reach the fire hall by phone because of busy circuits when the alarm is sounded. He said it is always probable and sometimes imperative for the police and firemen to make calls or be called during a fire alarm.

Surprisingly, she said, a great many of the multitude of inquiring calls are made by children who have no material interest in the location of the fire, and she expressed hope that parents would co-operate in keeping calls to a minimum. Miss Mountain said that the telephone management and staff were aware of the great personal interest that the location of the fire would have for a number of business men who would have natural concern for the safety of their stock and property, but these people would be advised if the fire
