

Odds and Ends.

A LAUGHABLE ADVENTURE.—During a hard winter, a clergyman in Vermont, being apprehensive that the accumulated weight of snow upon the roof of the barn might do some damage, resolved to prevent it by seasonable shovelling it off. He therefore ascended it, having first, for fear the snow might all slide off at once, and himself with it, fastened to his waist one end of the rope, and giving the other end to his wife, he went to work, but fearing still for his safety, he said: "My dear, tie the rope round your waist."

No sooner had she done this, when off went the snow, poor minister and all, and up went his wife. Thus, on one side of the barn the astonished and confounded clergyman hung, while on the other side hung his wife, high and dry, in majestic sublimity, dangling at the other end of the rope. At that moment, however, a gentleman passed by and delivered them from their perilous situation.

JUDGING VIRTUE BY ITS SMELL.—"It smells virtuous," said Mrs. Partington, as she smelt of the hartshorn-bottle that had long lain away in an old-fashioned high closet, before which the old lady stood, on a tall chair, exploring the dark interior of the receptacle for "unconscionable trifles." "It smells virtuous." We had often heard of the peculiar odor of goodness, that rises like frankincense amid an atmosphere of vice; and was a practical application that attested the justness of the term. It was sublime! and the figure standing there on the high chair, like Truth on a pedestal, with the specs, and the close cap, and the blue yarn stockings, formed a subject for a sculptor, poorer than which had immortalized hundreds.

AN EXCELLENT TEST OF AFFECTION.—"The summer is the time to try the strength of affection," said Mrs. Partington; "though it's pretty well to sing love songs beneath a window at midnight, in a rain-storm, or stand billing and cooing on the door-step till two o'clock in the morning. The winter season is the one. Many's the time my poor Paul has rid five miles to see me, the coldest weather; and often, the dear creature has been found in the morning fast asleep in the middle of the cow-yard, with the saddle on his own shoulders, from fatigue with courting me, and riding a hard-trotting horse. There was devotion! I never see a cow without thinking of poor Paul!" and, saying which, the good old lady went to bed.

Why is a baby like wheat? because it is first cradled, then thrashed, and finally becomes the flower of the family. A young man who was about jumping from a train while in motion, was deterred by a reporter, who asked for his name, age, business, and residence, for an obituary item. According to Milton, "Eve kept silence in Eden to hear her husband talk," said a gentleman to a lady friend, and then added in a melancholy tone, "Alas, there have been no Eve's since."

"Because there have been no husbands worth listening to," was the quick retort.

Agriculture.

THE USE OF CLOVER.

It would be very difficult to over-estimate the importance of this crop to all farmers engaged in mixed husbandry. Its introduction into England produced an entire revolution in the Agriculture of that country. Clover laid the foundation of all those wise systems of rotation that have since made the Agriculture of England a model, and a marvel to the world. Nor is its importance much less in those sections of America where its value is appreciated and rightly applied. Clover is valuable: 1. As a forage plant. 2. As a fertilizer. As a forage crop, its special value is in the quantity and quality of the hay that it produces, and the rapidity with which it comes to maturity after being sown. Clover properly cured, is almost equal to good Timothy, for beef cattle, and much superior to all other hay, for milch stock. In pasture, the same relative values hold with the addition that, for hogs, clover is a grand specific, superior perhaps, to all other grasses. The specific value of Clover, however, lies in its wonderful powers as a fertilizer. In this respect it is unequaled by any crop grown on the farm. The different ways in which it adds to the fertility of land are chiefly: 1st. Shading the surface of the soil. Owing to its rapid and luxuriant growth it soon forms a close and heavy covering over the soil, that acts as a mulch in protecting it from the scorching rays of the summer sun. At the same time that the soil is protected the weeds are smoothed out, and the land cleaned up. 2nd. By earfying and disintegrating the soil. Clover possesses peculiarly long and powerful tap-roots, that penetrate deep, loosening the soil and admitting the air. Thus rapidly changing the physical condition not only of the soil, but of the sub soil also. 3rd. By effecting important chemical changes, necessary to enrich the earth with plant food. Its abundance of foliage enables Clover to gather from the atmosphere immense stores of gasses that give life to the plants, which its far-reaching roots send deep down into the earth. Thus a clover field becomes, as it were, a great commissary, collecting food from the earth and the air for whatever crop that may follow. 4th. By preventing washing. The Clover mulch breaks the force of the hard beating rains, while the roots hold the soil in a mat as it were, thus preventing from gashing. 5th. As a green manure. Perhaps no crop is so valuable for turning under in a green stage, as Clover. In addition to the immense amount of rich vegetable matter in its abundant roots, the plant itself is extremely in all the materials necessary to the healthful growth of succeeding crops.—Diris Farmer.
