The Children.

The following lines were found in the desk of Charles Dickens after his death:—

When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And the school for the day is dismissed,
And the little ones gather around me
To bid me "Good night" and be kissed;
Oh, the little white arms that encircle;
My neck in a tender embrace!
Oh, the smiles that are halos of heaven
Shedding sunshine and love in my face!

And when they are gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood, too lovely to last;
Of love that my heart will remember
When it wakes to the pulse of the past.
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin—
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

Oh, my heart grows weak as a woman's,
And the fountain of feeling will flow,
When I think of the paths steep and stony,
Where the feet of the dear ones must go;
Of the mountains of sin hanging o'er them,
Of the tempests of fate blowing wild;
Oh, there's nothing on earth half so holy
As the innocent heart of a child.

They are idols of hearts and of households,
They are angels of God in disguise—
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still beams in their eyes;
Oh, those truants from earth and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild,
And I know now how Jesus could liken
The Kingdom of God to a Child.

Seek not a life for the dear ones
All radiant as others have done,
But that life may have just as much shadow
To temper the glare of the sun;
I would pray God to guard them from evil,
But my prayer would bound back to myself;
Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner,
But a sinner must pray for himself.

The twig is so easily bended,
I have banished the rule and the rod;
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,
They have taught me the goodness of God.
My heart is a dungeon of darkness,
When I shut them from breaking a rule,
My frown is sufficient correction,
My love is the law of the school.

I shall leave the old house in the Autumn,
To traverse its threshold no more;
Ah! how shall I look for the dear ones
That meet me each morn at the door.
I shall miss the "Good nights" and the kisses
And the gush of their innocent glee,
The group on the green and the flowers
That are brought every morning to me.

I shall miss them at noon and at even,
Their song in the school and the street;
I shall miss the low hum of their voices,
And the tramp of their delicate feet.
When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And death says the school is dismissed,
May the little ones gather around me,
And bid me "Good night" and be kissed!

The Body of Pope Pius IX.

REMOVING IT FROM ST. PETER'S TO THE CHURCH OF SAN LORENZO—DISGRACEFUL SCENE.

ROME, July 13.—At 12 o'clock last night the body of Pope Pius IX. was removed from its resting place in St. Peter's to the tomb provided for it in the tomb of San Lorenzo. Immediately after his death the body of the late Pope, encased in several coffins, one within the other, was elevated to a niche prepared for it high up on the walls of one of the chapels of St. Peter's. Meanwhile, in accordance with his will, a simple and inexpensive tomb had been prepared as its last resting place, under the altar of the Church of San Lorenzo, which is some distance from the Vatican. Pius IX. had certain tender reminiscences connected with his church, and wished his body to repose there. The tomb in the Church of San Lorenzo has been completed for some time, but for reasons satisfactory to his executors, the removal of the body was postponed until last night. During the day the stones forming the outer door of the niche were removed, and soon after sunset the coffin was drawn out and let down to the pavement of the chapel. A careful watch was preserved over it until all the arrangements were complete. At midnight the coffin was carried from the chapel, and placed upon a bier drawn by horses. The bier was surrounded by a large body of priests bearing lighted candles, and was followed by an immense number of members of Catholic associations with torches. The scene was solemn and sombre in the extreme. Hardly had the procession left the steps of St. Peter's than a number of young roughs swarmed around it, hustling the priests, endeavoring to extinguish the candles, and to overturn the bier, and shouting "Long Live Italy!" "Down with the Pope!" "Away with the black gowns," etc., and so on. The disturbance became so great that the city authorities were compelled to intervene. The Military soon dispersed all who did not belong to the cortege, and the procession moved on to its destination. The ceremony of placing the body in the tomb at San Lorenzo was completed before daylight.

A relic of the last century, in the shape of an iron tablet bearing a portrait and an inscription in honour of General Wolfe, has been discovered in a Quebec junk store.

Rifle Cracks at Walnut Hill, Boston.

The riflemen at Walnut Hill Boston, on Saturday, suffered much from the overpowering heat. The light was exceedingly bright, and the south wind gave no relief, either at 200 or 300 yards, where the contests for the day were located. There was a large attendance during the day, several ladies watching the sport from the povilion. The detail of all the matches shot Saturday is found in the subjoined summary:

The above is remarkably good shooting—the result of much practice and good ranges. P. E. Island Riflemen have had no practice this season on account of the insecurity of the range. Would it not be well for them to set to work and construct one with tents similar to Rideau Range at Ottawa.

Horse Breeding.

Mr. Lupton, in his able treatise on "The Horse as it Ought to Be," directs the attention of breeders to the breeding of horses for general purposes. 'This is just what our American cousins are doing, and the recent successes of Iroquois and Foxhall will give an increased impetus to the movement. In an exchange just to hand it is argued that there is every probability that "those horses with unmistakable proof in their figure, and with clear, flat legs, showing that the blood of the thoroughbred race horse is in judicious proportion, will always command the readiest sale; consequently fine stylish entire horses, with one-half to two-thirds pure racing blood, will then establish what would be the favorite general-purpose horse."

The Missing Bullet.

Nicholas Jackson, of Annapolis, Md., who was in the depot at the time the President was shot, writes that the first ball fired and which grazed the President's arm struck him in the breast, but its progress was stayed by a large silver medal presented him by a priest, and which he had worn round his neck for twelve years. After the shot was fired Jackson felt a stinging sensation in the breast, and thought he was fatally hurt. He left the place immediately with a friend, and on making an examination found the spot where the metal rested, sore and very red, but that he was uninjured. He found the bullet in his shirt bosom, has it in his possession, and will surrender it to the authorities on condition they return it. He kept the matter quiet, fearing detention as a witness and the loss of his situation.
