

THE WAR-TRAIL!

CHAPTER LXVI. LOST IN A CHAPARRAL.

I WAS chagrined, frantic, and despairing, but not surprised. This time there was no mystery about the disappearance of the steed; the chaparral explained it.

These sounds guided me, and without staying to follow his tracks, I dashed forward to the edge of the chaparral—at the point nearest to where I heard him moving.

I no longer heard the movements of the steed—neither foot-stroke, nor snapping sticks, nor breaking branches.

Once more I urged forward my horse, heading him almost at random; but I had not advanced a hundred paces before the misery of uncertainty again impelled me to halt.

This time I listened and heard nothing—not even the recoil of a bough. The steed had either stopped and was standing silent, or what was more probable, had gained so far in advance of me that his hoof-track was out of hearing.

Half frantic, angered at myself, too much excited for cool reflection, I lanced the sides of my horse, and galloped madly through the thicket.

I rode several hundred yards before drawing bridle, in a sort of desperate hope I might once more bring myself within ear-shot of the chaise.

Again I halted to listen. My recklessness proved of no avail. Not a sound reached my ear; even had there been sounds, I should scarcely have heard them above that issuing from the post-holes of my panting horse; but sound there was none. Silent was the chaparral around me—silent as death—not even a bird among its branches.

I felt something like self-execration; my imprudence I denounced over and over. But for my rash haste, I might yet have been upon the trail—perhaps within sight of the object of pursuit.

To recover the trace of him, I made several casts across the thicket. I rode first in one direction, then in another, but all to no purpose. I could find neither hoof-track nor broken branch.

I next thought me of returning to the open prairie, there retaking the trail, and following it thence. This was clearly the wisest, in fact the only course in which there was reason I should easily recover the trail, at the point where the horse had entered the chaparral, and thence I might follow it without difficulty.

I turned my horse round, and headed him in the direction of the prairie—or rather to what I supposed to be the direction—for this too had become conjecture.

It was not till I had ridden for a half-hour, for more than a mile through glade and bush—not till I had ridden nearly twice as far in the opposite direction—and then to right and then to left—that I pulled up my broken horse, dropped the rein upon his withers, and sat bent in my saddle under the full conviction that I too was lost!

Lost in the chaparral—that parched and hideous jungle, where every plant that carries a thorn seems to have place. Around grew acacias, mimosas, gleditschias, robinias, algarobias—all the thorny legumes of the world; above towered the splendid fourquiera with spiny stems; there flourished the "tornillo" (prosopis glandulosa), with its twisted beans; there the "junco" (koelerinia), whose very leaves are thorns. There I saw spear-pointed yuccas and clawed (agave dasylirion); there, too, the univert sul cactaceae (opuntia, mammillaria, cereus and chichocactus); even the very grass was thorny—for it was a species of the "mezquite grass," whose knotted clumps are armed with sharp spurs!

Through this horrid thicket I had not passed unscathed; my garments were already torn, my limbs were bleeding! My limbs—and hers?

Of hers alone was I thinking; those fair proportioned members—those sily rounded arms—that smooth, delicate skin—bosom and shoulders bare—the thorn—the scratch—the tear. Oh! it was agony to think!

By action alone might I hope to still my emotions; and once more rousing myself from the lethargy of painful thought, I urged my steed onward through the bushes.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. ILLUSTRATED.

"Always varied, always good, always improving."—CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, JR. Harper's Magazine, the most popular illustrated periodical in the world, begins its sixty-fourth volume with the December Number. It represents what is best in American literature and art; and its marked success in England—where it has already a circulation larger than that of any English magazine of the same class—has brought into its service the most experienced writers and artists of Great Britain. The forthcoming volumes for 1882 will in every respect surpass their predecessors.
