THE DAILY EXAMINER

OCTOBER 6, 1900

Sir Charles Tupper. To our Farmers, greeting:—"The Conservatives, if placed in power, will endeavor to establish such a system of cold storage and transportation as will ensure the placing of the surplus of all of the more perishable products of our farms, orchards and dairies upon the British markets, speedily and in prime condition,—thus securing for Canada all the advantages in prices and prestige which the superiority of her fruits and other produce ought to assure. The Liberal-Conservative party can point with pride, which is justified by past history, to the fact that it is a party of pledge-keepers."

IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

This topic has again been made prominent as a result of the publication of Captain Wood's pamphlet, entitled "The British Command of the Sea, and What it Means to Canada." The Captain points out that Great Britain, in the past has never had more than three foreign naval powers to reckon with, but in the near future may be confronted by six. France and Russia will spend an extra $135,000,000 on new ships in the next seven or eight years. In the same way, Germany will double her navy in 15 years, at an extra cost of $350,000,000. The United States has no such definite program, but it is safe to say that the American navy will have doubled its strength within ten years of the Spanish war. The Japanese are hampered by financial considerations and by the concurrent increase of their army; but they will be half as strong again five years hence as they were in the Chinese war, and twice as strong in another five. Italy has been steadily losing its relative naval strength for the last 10 or 15 years. As she is heavily mortgaged in every sense of the word, she can only expect to be a good last among the seven greater navies. Judging by the extraordinary development of foreign navies, Capt. Wood estimates that the British navy should have an active personnel of 150,000, backed by an effective reserve of 100,000. Capt. Wood's theory of Imperial defence is built upon four fundamental postulates, which he enlarges upon in turn. They are as follows:

1. The life of the Empire depends upon the command of the sea.
2. The command of the sea depends upon battle-fleets-in-being.
3. The maintenance of battle-fleets-in-being depends upon sound naval policy.
4. A sound naval policy now demands the intelligent co-operation of disciplined public opinion, throughout Great Britain; making the navy so truly imperial in all its resources, organization and control that it may become the first complete factor in the unified system of Imperial defence.

Captain Wood quotes Lafayette: "In any operation and under all circumstances a decisive naval superiority is to be considered as a fundamental principle and the basis upon which every hope of success must ultimately depend," and remarks that "No navy, No empire" is the A B C of Imperial Defence."

Continuing, the Captain points out that whereas Great Britain alone bears the burden of the navy, Greater Britain shares all the benefits. This state of things, he says, can't go on forever. It is the duty of the colonier, and of Canada especially, as the elder scion of the original stock, to voluntarily assume her share of the burden of Imperial defence. Canada has a total annual movement of tonnage amounting to 50,000,000 by water, and 30,000,000 by rail, all of which is dependent, directly or indirectly, for protection upon the navy. Roughly speaking, Canada possesses about 4 per cent. of the whole sea borne wealth of the Empire. Canada, should, therefore, contribute to the Imperial navy, not only from a sense of duty, but because our contribution would be an excellent investment from a business point of view. "We need not," he says, "be in the least alarmed about the enormousness of our quota to the personnel. Reckoning our maritime populations at a fifth of our total, taking only a hundredth of this fifth for all naval purposes, we might contribute 100 to the active peace strength of the navy and 10,000 to the localized Canadian Imperial reserves. These last would, of course, stay at home, except in case of war, when they would be drafted for service all as required. Such an addition as this to the indivisible strength of the navy would go far towards maintaining the British command of the sea, on which we all depend, whilst it would by no means strain our resources, or check their peaceful development."

Captain Wood's brochure will give rise to thought about a matter that is evidently of prime importance.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—Bad weather for wheeling!
—Defections from the party of broken promises continue.
—On the eve of the election tenders are called for an extension of the breakwater at Bras. How active the Government is, just before the election!

—The Halifax Chronicle repeats the false statement that La Presse of Montreal has left the Conservative Party. La Presse has been an "Independent" and continues to be an "Independent."

—The best friends of Sir Louis Davies and the Patriot cannot excuse their outrageous attempt to deceive upon the ballot question. It is now seen that the secrecy of the ballot is preserved—except in the case of fraudulent voters.

—With the number of this week, L'Impartial enters upon the eighth year of its existence. We congratulate our esteemed western contemporary, and only French newspaper of the province, on its success.

—Sir Louis Davies is being condemned on all hands, first for trying to destroy the secrecy of the ballot, and, secondly, for trying to throw upon Senator Ferguson blame for a provision that was in the Government's bill and for which the Government is fully responsible.

—L'Impartial was greatly pleased with the Provincial Exhibition of this year, and praises highly the courtesy of the executive committee and other exhibition officers. It also gives a word of deserved praise to the hard worked train officials who, it says, have made many friends by their attention to the comfort of the passengers.

—The Montreal Gazette remarks that Sir Charles Tupper's cold storage proposals are being received with much hilarity by the Liberal press. So were the Conservative Government's cold storage proposals in 1895. The Liberal Government adopted the idea of the 18 5 policy and is quite likely to do the same with that of 1900. The Liberal minister never pay attention to what a Liberal newspaper says, and the Liberal newspapers do not seem to expect them to.
