ELLEN'S DIARY

Harvesting Needs Sun And Warm West Wind

I could do nicely with two summers "James commented at dinner, when a cool wind at the open door gave a hint of the winter to come. We dined alone this noon. Sometimes with an uninvited" expression in his young eyes, Peter comes at a fancy from the house across the lake to join us. To chat and to smile, and always to express pleased surprise over some item of the meal, or over something about. He collects too then, any tasteful scrap left over, to carry out to scamp and the cats.

The rabbit family has been reduced to a minimum, by sharing with other small ones, because, as Alex, a sober lad, pointed out one day when the school down the River Road was about to claim him, "How can you study well with the care of a lot of rabbits on your mind?"

The pets and garden, however, still include a mare, who actually leads a lady's life, and there is Alex, a sober lad, pointed out one day when the school down the River Road was about to claim him, "How can you study well with the care of a lot of rabbits on your mind?"

ATTACKS U.S. STAND

SAIGON (Reuters) — Launching a strong new attack on U.S. policy in South Viet Nam, the English language newspaper Times of Viet Nam claimed Thursday that President Kennedy's policy is to hasten his decisions on rumor, not fact. "Kennedy has said in effect the Vietnamese are with us, the United States, (but) against their own government" the newspaper said in an editorial.

Augusting Cove WI Aids Project

The September meeting of the Augusting Cove WI met at the home of Mrs. Kathleen Murphy with 16 members and two visitors in attendance. The meeting was opened by repeating the collect in union. Correspondence was read and discussed.

It was decided to send $5.00 to the North to help get a WI organized. The secretary was asked to write and see about having the handicraft was come in February.

The reports of the committees were heard and action appointed. Sick and convalescing members were mentioned. Mrs. Priscilla MacFadyen and Mrs. M. J. LeClerc, school, Mrs. Lillian Cutcliffe and Mrs. M. J. LeClerc, school, Mrs. Lillian Cutcliffe and Mrs. M. J. LeClerc, school.

"Yes, but cheerful" we said. "Did she mean the one with the long whiskers, that stays at the other farm?" a youngster present whispered to us.

"Two summers ago we agreed with James this noon." "Though they do say some folks who have farmed and where there are long periods of sunshine, that it too can become monotonous. Our winters bear their charms."

We thought of the blue shadows patterning beautifully the sunny white of the snow, the sheen of the frosts, the drift and loveliness of a silver shawl, a winter storm molding its marvels faintly, and the charm of a gentle snowfall, coming down on roof and field and tree, like the comforting benediction at the close of a Church service.

"Charm!" James echoed. "It has now."

"And now that we have it, what do we farm-folks wish most from Autumn?"

By day, the sun and with it, a warming and wish most from that general mellowness of season, which gives folks to go to their remaining harvestings, gathering to granary and bin.

And then, in an orderly succession of farming let us have the red-brown furrows of the fall.

We ask for nights when the stars are friendly, and the moon sets her silver magic over all. So that when bobolinking this may say, gathering up the memory to keep, "now isn't this a fitting end to a perfect day?"

Crisp rustling leaves underfoot, we shall have. Mornings overlaid with frost, bare and bare trees, until the oak sheds last coppery ones, and thoughts turn from the past to the delight and blessing of the Christmas ahead.

MARY HAWORTH

Lochinvar Role Proves A Defeminizing Pitfall

Dear Mary Haworth: Early this summer I met a young man who was my senior with whom I fell deeply in love. He felt the same and gave me a rush of joy. I would be going off to school in September.

After a few whirlwind courtships he proposed and I accepted. I wanted to shout it to the world, as this was my first love and I was thrilled beyond words. But he wanted to keep our pledge a secret from everyone but our parents.

As time passed I felt a strain in our relationship. Finally, after much prodding, I learned it wasn't marriage his parents objected to, but me. They had heard rumors about me and my family and wanted to know the truth. I told him he would have to decide that I couldn't go off to school in such suspense. He said he would.

Next day, because I love him so very much, I went on the spur of the moment to see his parents, to try to straighten things out myself. I was there very nice to me and I left feeling everything was going to be fine.

The following day, a very angry young man came to tell me we were through, that he no longer loved me and felt he was being pushed into marriage. My parents say I am lucky to find him out before marriage; that he is a wedding hiding behind his parents, and had no intention of marriage from the start.
