Happenings of The Week

Hail to December! This last month of the year may come in with robustness, but it also brings to us the season of Good-Will and Peace to all Mankind. Already the Spirit of Christmas is abroad in the land and the portrayal of this Spirit comes in many beloved ways. There are the Church services, the home gatherings of family and friends, the Christmas paintings, music and literature. So in our salutation to December, this month which is primarily set apart for holy or religious use we say "Hallowed Be December," and in thinking of the festivities which enter into this month we again say "Hail to December."

The Queen Mary Needlework Guild of Charlottetown packed and despatched two large boxes of warm clothing for Korean relief. This shipment was sent through the Unitarian Services Committee of Canada.

"For stark they have been coming to ours one day, and we have been going to theirs the next" was the delightful comment of a St. Peter's in connection with the St. Peter's and Baptist Church teas. These outstanding teas and bazaars are all part of the year's activities or the joy of living, and attended by numerous friends from all Churches.

"She puts new life into stained glass" is the caption of the Cover Story by Robert Fulford in Mayfair Magazine for December, 1954, on Miss Yvonne Williams of Toronto. Miss Williams an artist and designer has specialized in stained glass for a quarter of a century. The high degree of excellence of Miss Williams' work is indicated in the interesting and well-written article recognition has come to this artist. In that she has been commissioned to create more than 250 windows for 56 separate churches, schools and chapels. In connection with the article there is a full page sensitive photo study of Miss Williams by Mr. Peter Varley. Miss Williams is a sister of Mrs. J. P. Miller, Charlottetown, and has been a frequent visitor to this Province.

Advise Early Church-Going For Children

The most important job you have as parents is to raise your youngsters to be good, decent adults. Luckily, you don't have to do that alone. Schools are of tremendous help, as the child grows older. But even before school age, your youngster can be helped to get on the right track by taking him to church or Sunday school. Purpose of Training Religious training teaches a child to be good. A good child doesn't misbehave. At what age should you start your child in a church or Sunday School. That depends entirely upon his ability to adjust himself to his surroundings. Last Sunday, a woman and her four children, ranging in age from about two to eight, sat in the pew directly in front of me. I expected the children to be restless, and a distraction to everyone around. But they weren't. Children Were Good That little eight-year-old girl actually mothered the youngest child, hushing her at each little cry. The other two, both boys — one was about three and the other a year or so older — crawled up on the bench and just sat there. Maybe they didn't know exactly what was going on, but they realized that they were in church, and that where you are in church, you must behave. When you think your child is old enough, take him two or three times. If he fusses a great deal, wait a few months and then try again. Once they've gone a few times, most youngsters will look forward to these Sunday visits. If you promise your child you are going to take him to church — or do anything of the kind — anywhere — you've got to keep that promise. Don't take promises to your children too lightly. Your youngster will soon learn. Continued on page 9

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

This week turned the schedule of the farm-work into "dat ole" pattern of winter. On these farms, this gives the chores—the milking and feeding and cleaning of stables and sties in the fields, first place in the day. Any time to spare then is put toward the extra endeavours of the places. James declared this morning he "didn't know where they would find any time these short days to go to work in the woods." Nevertheless, new axe-handles have been acquired in anticipation of it and today he brought something indoors with a care that aroused our curiosity. "They are late years ax-companes the wood-chopping and lumbering. In sunshine how straight the column will rise, in cloudy days it will linger darkly along the fields. Meanwhile, James goes to spend most of his day at Alderlea to help the younger farmer there with a dozen cares of that place. Our farm-assistant of the fall, left on a morning of this week to be gone to interests of his own. Partings bring regrets. "I'll be missing you," James said. "All the family will," we added. "Oh well," he laughed "when you come up to Boston, you'll have to look me up. I won't be hard to find—anyone will be able to tell you my whereabouts!" And so he left us with a laugh on our lips, this man who has no intention of leaving behind him the red cliffs of this sea-girt Isle, but who will go, we suppose as in former winters, to drive Her Majesty's Mail on a rural route which has its beginning at the corner-store in his old community of Home. A welcome traveller he will be we are sure, especially to the children of the farms as he bears to the mail-boxes lovely tokens of the season of Christmas to come. How smartly now we are being borne toward it! "I never forget now to say my prayers," Mack offered the other day. "But you always remembered" we said. "Not always. Sometimes I forgot and with a shy smile 'sometimes I didn't feel like it. But I say them now' he nodded. "You see, it's getting handier Christmas!" In handy-places its scenes are all about: stars of December gleaming, flocks along the hillsides; little towns at the cross-roads. How easy to see these as we hear again childish voices rehearsing the Carols that never grow old. And what of the farm-houses as Christmas draws near? "My little house! When Winter's here I light a candle, yellow bright And fill the room with taper light, So hold the precious hours more dear. I build a fire with pine cones close. Cooking sweet chestnuts, whilst outside The sudden storms of winter ride, And life weeps for the banished rose. And oh, my hearthside is more dear. By candlelight: I dream the while And see the flames grow gray, and smile. To think of Christmas drawing near." Until Monday — — — — — Diary — — — — — Good-night

Kitchen Accessories Make Good Presents

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

When a Christmas list is long, and the pocketbook short, selecting gifts presents a problem. The Chef and I made a quick tour of the kitchen utensil gadgets and china sections of several departments, and came back not only with ideas for Christmas gifts, but with a shopping bag full of gifts for the Taste-Test Kitchen.

Prune Whip Gel: Add 1 envelope unflavored gelatin to 3 lbs. cold water. Let stand 5 min.; then dissolve over boiling water. Slowly stir into 1 c. cooked sieved prune pulp, or use "junior" chopped prunes. Add 1 tsp. lemon juice, a few grains salt and 1/2 c. sugar. Stir until very smooth. Refrigerate until beginning to thicken. Then beat 2 large egg whites stiff and fold in.
