By IAN DONALDSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia Power Commission today announced "a selling job" to get its 29,000 domestic customers to a more power.

Morley G. Taylor, manager of the $50,000,000 Crown corporation, told a press conference Tuesday that reduced power rates for domestic users become effective immediately as part of a program to boost consumption in rural areas.

"The idea is to induce customers to install more electric appliances. The commission's domestic customers use an average of 900 kilowatt hours a year, about one-quarter the Canadian average."

and municipalities which have their own distribution systems. AVERAGE RATES The commission's rates have been practically unchanged since 1957. "We have had a multiplicity of rates," Mr. Taylor said. "We have attempted to throw them all into a pot and come up with an average rate in line with rates in other areas."

JOHNNIE'S FISH AND CHIPS

REDUCED COSTS
Power costs per kilowatt hour over 300 hours per month will be reduced by half a cent.

Under this rate, a domestic customer using 300 kilowatt hours a month would pay 56 cents less than before. On using 400 kilowatt hours would get it $1.05 cheaper.

Some industries will pay slightly more for power, others slightly less. The new uniform industrial rate is a standardization of several rates previously in effect.

The commission supplies power to about 60 per cent of rural Nova Scotia. Indirectly it serves another 50,000 customers in towns
