LETTERS TO EDITOR.

To Editor Guardian

SIR,—I wish to call attention to the ungentlemanly conduct of our resident postmaster towards the public generally, but more especially towards strangers who have to frequent the post office. Even ladies are not exempt, and a gentle reminder from Inspector Brecken would be in order. I can assure you the matter cannot be overlooked much longer.

Hoping this will be a warning to him,
I remain, yours, etc.,
STRANGER.

Summerside Schools.

Dear Editor.

SIR,—A short time ago we heard a good deal about the high standard of the Summerside schools, especially the higher grades, the efficiency of the Teachers, and the superior judgment of the trustees who are largely instrumental in bringing the schools to such a high state, claiming that they were second to none on the Island and better than the Charlottetown schools.

Now, I would like to know how much truth there is in this assertion. We find according to the published list of those who passed the entrance examination to the Normal School and P. W. College, that the number from Summerside is small indeed. In Summerside there are eleven teachers and they have succeeded in panning out two; for the one taking a Scholarship though credited to Summerside, only attended there a short time and belongs to a country school; one is a son of the late Inspector of Schools for Prince County, and no doubt recived valuable help from his father, the other got a great deal of care after school hours from one whose "attainments" are not to be doubted, which was quite allowable under the circumstances.

Charlottetown, I think, has 29 teachers and they turned out 25 students to the P. W. College and Normal School, nearly one for every teacher, while Summerside shows only one for about five. Again, in looking over the list you will find that in different parts of the Island, where there are only two teachers, they have in some places turned out four, and in quite a number of places three. Now, if this can be taken as a means of ascertaining to some extent the progress of our schools, Summerside is certainly behind.

I see no necessity for "suppressing" the true state of things and vainly boasting about something that in reality does not exist. It does not show "superior" judgment, but rather that something is wrong.

Yours truly,
JOHN DICKIESON.

[We do not think our correspondent has taken the right means to ascertain the progress of a school. The Davies school is conceded to be one of the best on the Island, and its pupils are doing excellent work. All who competed in the P. of W. C. examinations succeeded. ED. G.]

THE ADDRESS.

in the provision of a library of works for teachers, but until a better mode of distribution shall have been devised this must remain ineffective, for the books since their purchase have remained unused. I would suggest that our Chief Superintendent be asked to take charge of the books as chief librarian, and have the volumes distributed among the principals of high schools, to be again redistributed among the teachers in their neighborhood, the principals themselves acting as subordinate librarians and returning all the books once a year, say at the meeting of our association, for redistribution. The superintendent and inspectors could form a library committee. If this is thought impracticable then I hope the association will fall upon some plan to arrange for the successful distribution of the books. I have said that the great drawback to teachers is the small salary they receive. Perhaps I need not have said it for it is universally admitted. Our government is paying now a larger proportion of the revenue for the purpose of education than it should. What is to be done is the question on all hands, and as yet nothing has been done or attempted. I have pointed out that by requiring teachers to reach a higher professional standing the profession itself will attain a higher level. Fewer will engage in it, and those who do will be able to command, and will be worthy of higher remuneration.

This presents only one side of the case. It is useless to place on the market a superior article at a high price, beside an inferior one at a low price so long as the purchaser cannot appreciate the value of the superior article for he will be sure to purchase the cheaper. This brings us to the next difficulty. Our people are out of harmony and sympathy with the teaching profession. They are accustomed to look at questions touching its interests from wrong standpoints. For example the question of mid-summer holidays is in point. The people when the change was made did not understand why it was made. They could not see the reason for it, and consequently they looked upon it as an innovation for the special convenience of the teachers. This is only the natural outcome of a lack of enlightenment in the real facts of the case and could scarcely have been otherwise. It is the case with regard to almost any question in connection with our schools. Our people have no source of information on such matters and consequently proceed blindly to oppose anything in the way of improvement or advancement. The remedy for this is to educate the people into sympathy with us and into a proper understanding of our relations to one another; and it is in the hands of the teachers themselves to do this. I claim that the greatest medium by which the minds and opinions of men are to-day moulded, is the press. Doubtless the public platform and the pulpit have their weight; but in the great secular questions of the day, the press is the motor that harmonizes thought and places the truth before the public mind, so as to be understood and appreciated. How many of the difficulties which the teacher meets would disappear if parents could only be brought to understand and perform their duties toward the school; and yet the only duties why they do not, is because these reasons have never been impressed upon them. It may be argued that there are abundant educational journals and books which may be read by both teachers and people; but the answer is they do not read them. Very few of our teachers even take a school journal, while our local press has nothing whatever to say on such matters The consequence is that neither people, teachers nor pupils profit in the least by all that has been written for their special enlightenment. Our people must be educated in the principles underlying our educational system, in the difficulties that are met with, in the evils attendant thereon and in the duty they have to perform in assisting to provide the remedy. The medium for their enlightenment must be the public press.

Some years ago an educational column was opened in the Examiner, with the late Thomas A. Lepage as editor. The scheme failed for lack of contributors. Last year the Pioneer offered a column to be devoted to the discussion of educational topics, but not one contribution was made. It seems to me that a little organization is necessary just here. This association ought to be able to supply material to fill a column of the Pioneer every week, and questions on which the public need to be enlightened might be opened up by the teachers through this medium. If it could be done, and I cannot see why not, an educational paper, not merely for the teachers, but for the public, should be established. This may seem visionary just now, however badly needed, but I take the liberty to suggest that this Association appoint from among its members a literary committee, whose duty it shall be to supply material to fill one column of the "Pioneer," or any other paper that may be disposed to extend to us such privilege. I know nothing in which our people need to be educated more than in the matter of education itself. Our press gives abundant instruction in religion, in temperance, in politics, in farming, in dairying, and in the management of pigs and poultry, and it is all brought within easy reach of the public, who profit accordingly. But what is written on the subject of education is read, perhaps, only by those who need it least, while it is not placed within reach of those who need it most. The only remedy is to introduce those matters into the local press and bring them directly before the people.
