Dorothy Dix Says

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: What's the matter with young men? They seem not to know even the elementary rules of good manners. After making a date with a girl they stand her up without even offering any excuse or letting her know that they are not coming. We often have boys call up a half hour before the dinner which was prepared for them, and have them say that they are not coming. They don't bother even to make an excuse. My daughter very seldom has a letter answered. Boys go off to college and make her promise to write to them, which she does, but they don't take the time to answer. What's the matter with them? Why didn't their mothers teach them the decent things in life?

A GIRL'S MOTHER

ANSWER: I don't know why mothers don't teach their boys good manners, nor do I know why girls' mothers don't teach their daughters to have enough self-respect to resent the boys' lack of manners. For the thing that is the matter with the boys is that they are spoiled rotten by the girls, who are so anxious to have dates that they will permit the boys to put any sort of affront upon them. If the girls had enough spunk and backbone to stage a rebellion, they could make boys treat them with the respect that men used to show women.

I am not defending the manners of the young men of today. Heaven knows they have none to defend, but it is because girls make themselves so cheap that young men hold themselves so dear.

DEAR MISS DIX: What makes the world go round—money or love?

ANSWER: The poets say that love makes the world go round. Cynics say that if money isn't everything it will buy the balance. I side with the poets, if you have to take your choice, but love and money make a grand combination and things go sweetest and smoothest when you have a little of both.

Island Odds And Ends

The name Abegweit has been connected with athletics in the Province for more than half a century, and it is altogether fitting that it should be considered as the label for any hockey team from the Island in a Maritime League.

Many Charlottetown citizens can remember back fifty years or more, when they played with the Abegweit hockey or football teams. Jimmie Coyle, the forerunner of the Patriot composing room, is one of those who played on many Abegweit football teams, and can remember the early history of the Club from personal recollections.

Jimmie was one of the starry bunch of Abegweits, who in the early part of the century could always muster a football team at short notice to beat (nine times out of ten) anything in the Maritimes, whether it was a college aggregation or the representative of some town. Jimmie passed on his athletic ability to several sons including Jack, a fine hockey player who was killed in the last war. Jack Coyle played a type of game very similar to Bill Cowley, so long stand-out with Boston Bruins. Cowley's style was a peculiar weaving one, very deceptive and hard for defence people to fathom. The younger Coyle certainly would have gone places had he been spared to play out his career.

Another son of James Coyle, is Jimmie junior, now a college professor. Jimmie junior played in the back-field of St. Dunstons, and on other football teams, and was a very hard man to stop. Undoubtedly, James senior, will be very much interested in the retention of the name Abegweit. Incidentally, Mr. Coyle has been an employee of the Patriot for about forty-five years, and has followed sport all over the world very keenly. After the first Great War, he wrote a small book listing the names of Island athletes who participated in the conflict, and giving a short account of their athletic achievements. This book is still retained by many former Island athletes, because it constitutes a record which otherwise might have become lost.

Engineers and diving experts have been hovering on and under Hillsboro Bridge for a week or more. Seems that the plan to extend the approaches from both ends, and then bridge a narrower stretch of water with wider spans may be followed. If so, a mental hazard and an oft-recurring bottle-neck will be removed. Few motorists who cross to or from the Southport side do so without a nagging worry. There is always the danger of collision on the narrow right-of-way, and the not infrequent traffic hold-up. Two large trucks meeting anywhere on one of the spans can tie up all movement any time at all. Quite often one truck must back off to the approaches before traffic can be resumed normally.

No improvement is more needed than the proposed Hillsboro bridge one, and none will give satisfaction to more people. The whole of Southern Queens and Kings County, and much of Western Kings will say Amen to any undertaking which makes the crossing of the river quicker and more care-free.

Fortune River and shoreline one of the loveliest spots in the Province and at one time singled out by the world's greatest stage folks as a summer colony is in full summer glory. Famous for more than its beauty it raises in quantity and quality, that homely farm product which has given the Island its practical if not poetic nickname "Spud Island." At Fortune Bridge and Harbor and a bit beyond to Eglinton, the Coffins, the Aitkens and the Burkes, McLeods, the Blacks and McClumpas raise tubers in quantity. The name McClumpas, of course, could be nothing but Scotch, and in this case, the owner Mr. Alex McClumpas proves it with a pleasing burr, matched by the accent of his next door neighbor, Mr. John Black.

It is a pleasant bit of county with the richer type of prosperous farm homes and buildings in the majority, looking all the better for the natural beauty of their surroundings.

Farmers, in the district are progressive and a few no longer pick potatoes by hand; they have purchased mechanical pickers and are able to cut manual labor costs considerably. Tractors and trucks and modern farm equipment are and have been in common use for some years.

Souris Regatta was a great show, well-planned, carried out with enthusiasm after careful forethought, and fine co-operation by Souris citizens.

The boat races provided more than the average amount of thrills and were a revelation to many of the land-bound people who enjoyed them. The lobster banquet (and there was plenty of ham and other meats for those who wanted it) was excellent. The meal was unbeatable.

Some small criticism was made about the loudspeaker system. It has been suggested that next year, the spectators should be enabled to hear the race judges giving the boat directions, and that an announcer describe the races as in horse-racing. Some sea-wise Doctor Dougan might be uncovered who could tell those on shore what's doing afloat, the names of the boats as they career around the markers, the names of the crews and what localities they represent.

It is understood that some such improvements will be made, and that the race course will be redrawn to bring the boats into closer and longer near-view of the spectators.

With its wonderfully suited natural setting for such an event the Souris Regatta should become one of the Island's looked for annual entertainments.

You can beat a race, but you can't beat the races, is a time-accepted truth, meaning that you may pick a winner now and again but in the majority of cases you are bound to pick a loser.

There are people who attend the night-racing at Charlottetown who do not leave everything to the Goddess of Fortune; a small number call into play the trickeries of the chisel.

A favorite stunt of these small-time petty crooks is to mix a couple of losing tickets with a couple of pay-off tickets, in the hope of collecting double. Other gentlemen on the make have been known to change the numbers on a losing ticket to make it coincide with the winning number, and there are the aggressive loud-talking boys who insist they were sold the wrong ticket, and want to be paid on the winning horse. All of these simple-minded plans of fooling the women who pay pari-mutuel winners are seldom successful because of precautions taken to frustrate them.

It is the cheap fringe of a race track crowd who stoops to such things, the ordinary race follower is above thinking of winning any way but honestly. One illustration of the square-shooting attitude was seen during the run-off of Friday night's card. A young girl, in a pay-off wicket paid 100 much on a ticket. If she had continued at this rate, it would have been a serious mistake to explain to track officials. The young man who received the money was not one of the win-at-any-price people. He quickly called the girl's attention to her error, returned the money and headed off further mistakes.

A bystander, appreciative of the young man's action remarked in good old Island fashion "that boy shows he was 'brought up' well. The boy was "Bill" Gillespie Jr. Anybody who knows Bill Senior knows there are only two sides to a question "right or wrong." Bill Senior never has been known to relax his standards.
