"O, for a neck as long as a Crane's!" exclaimed an old champagne drinker, after he had regaled himself with "a long drink" of the sparkling liquid, "that I might the longer enjoy the relish of every single drop as it finds its way down—down—to its destination." "O, for a neck as long as a Crane's," exclaimed Elder Laird, as he swallowed down a huge dose of falsehood and slander of his own invention, "that I might the longer enjoy the relish and full essence of every single lie as it finds its way down my delicate throat; for slander, calumny and lies are nectar to my palate."

The poor Elder seems to be in a sad plight. He must have had rather an uncomfortable night's rest after swallowing such a huge dose. He has not made the faintest attempt to sustain the charges he made against the religion of over two hundred millions of his fellow Christians, spread over the face of the globe. No attempt to deny that the "very good man, whose name was Wishart," was a vile traitor, and certainly no saint. No attempt to deny that men of the Wishart school were mere tools in the hands of Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth, or that the eighth Henry was the "aider and abettor" in the murder of Cardinal Beaton. No attempt to deny anything we have advanced. But we forget. Yes, he throws another handful of dirt in the face of the poor Cardinal, but, as J. K. was wont to say, in the good old times, "he does not come within the bray of Ass of it." To blacken the character of Cardinal Beaton appears to be David Laird's hobby. He takes his dirt this time from Froude's History of England; but any man of ordinary reading knows that Froude's History of England is but a mere libel on the character, not only of leading Scotchmen of a certain period, but also of the Pope, and of leading Irish, Spanish and French characters as well. One of the most gifted and conscientious writers of the present century, Count de Maistre, has said, very truly, that history, for the last three hundred years, almost appears to be a huge conspiracy against truth; and Froude's history is a striking instance of this. Had we sufficient time or space at our disposal, we would be doing our readers a good service by giving them a brief review of some of Froude's most glaring passages. The Dublin Review thus speaks of it:—

"Mr. Froude's earlier volumes were marked by two prominent characteristics—a love of paradox and a hatred of Catholicism. The Quixotism of his paradoxical apology of his early hero, Henry VIII., had almost proved fatal to the success of his work. In his latter volumes, Mr Froude has, for the most part held his love of paradox strongly in check; but we regret to have to say that he has, perhaps in self-compensation, given looser rein to his anti-Roman prejudices."

Froude has the good taste to call the Archbishop of St. Andrew's an Episcopal scoundrel. He has, in a word, overshot the mark. He laid it on too heavily, and hence it is, as the Dublin Review truly remarks, that his unscrupulousness and reckless disregard of truth "almost proved fatal to the success of his work." And yet, this is the authority from which David Laird delights to quote. Are not those to be pitied who are regaled semi-weekly with such intellectual provender as the columns of the Patriot afford? No wonder that many otherwise well disposed old dames hold up their hands in surprise when any reference is made to the true account of some of the most interesting events in the history of their fatherland.

We were once much amused, while in the course of conversation with a good old dame; she made mention of Robert Bruce, the battle of Bannockburn, &c. It is easy to see, said we, that Robert Bruce began that day well; for you know he went to confession that morning, and himself and his mailed warriors heard mass devoutly on that eventful morning, before going into battle. The good old lady stared us in the face and held up her hands in astonishment. We might have told her, for instance, that while weighing anchor in the Red Sea, we once fished up one of the wheels of Pharoah's chariot, without raising a doubt in her mind. But that Robert Bruce or any of his heroes, had gone to confession, or heard mass before engaging in battle, or that they were even papists, was a piece of information which she was scarcely prepared to hear. She even appeared to doubt the truth of our assertion, while, from a Protestant historian, we read to her the following circumstances connected with the history of the battle of Bannockburn.

"On Monday, 24th June, at the first break of day, the Scottish King confessed, and along with his army heard mass. This solemn service was performed by Maurice, the Abbot of Inchaffray, upon an eminence in front of their line, and after its conclusion the soldiers took breakfast, and arranged themselves under their different banners. At this moment the Abbot of Inchaffray, barefooted, and holding a crucifix aloft in his hand, walked slowly along the Scottish line, and as he passed, the whole army knelt down, and prayed for a moment with the solemnity of men who felt it might be their last act of devotion. "See," cried Edward, "they are kneeling—they ask mercy!" "They do my liege," replied Umfraville, "but it is from God, not from us. Trust me you men will win the day, or die upon the field." "Be it so then," said Edward, and immediately commanded the charge to be sounded," &c., &c., &c.

We would venture to say that some of the most interesting circumstances connected with this page of Scottish history are as new to the pious Elder as they are to many other old women. The Elder affects to be quite scandalized at our disloyalty, in having had the presumption to write the names of Victoria and Isabella on the same page. But we can tell him, that although we love our Queen and country, at least, as much as he does, still this should not prevent us from doing simple justice to the name of the Queen of a great and chivalrous nation. We therefore hurl back with indignation, in the canting hypocrites teeth, his mean and cowardly insinuation as to our want of respect or loyalty to our own beloved Queen. As regards Queen Isabella of Spain, whom the Elder delights to slander, we can inform our readers that Mr. Prescott, the eminent historian, and for many years U. S. Minister at the Court of Madrid, entertained a very different opinion of that much wronged Sovereign. He was always wont to speak of Isabella the Second as "A MOST EXCELLENT WOMAN," and to express his most utter astonishment, how such vile reports could have got into circulation concerning her. What has the pious Elder to say to this?

But why should we care what the vile hypocrite has to say. It took him one half of last week to hunt up a few lying extracts from Froude, and by the end of the week he promised to prove that "Catholic children are taught that Protestant's ought not to live." But really he takes a strange way of redeeming his promise. We cannot see what object he could have in view in his last issue, if it be not to give a wider circulation to the offensive opinions expressed by W. H. Pope in 1863—1864, and which, we have been informed, David Laird has printed in pamphlet form for the edification of the public. The point he has undertaken to prove is, that "Catholic children are taught that Protestants ought not to live." We want no more claptrap. If the proper authorities of the land entertain any serious doubts or uneasiness on this head, let a Commission of competent persons be appointed and have the matter investigated and settled in the proper way.

He says that we are very eager to get up a "row." If his memory serves him, it was he himself who, without any provocation, in his issue of the 14th inst., tried to get up a "row." For our part, we merely wished to let him feel how effectually we could quell a "row."

Surely it is not essential to Protestantism, in this enlightened age, to be forever vilifying and misrepresenting Catholics. We certainly think that the Hon. T. Heath Haviland is, at least, as respectable a Protestant as David Laird; and yet his Protestantism does not prevent him from expressing his readiness and willingness to do simple justice to his Catholic fellow colonists.—(Pardon the comparison, Mr. Haviland; in bringing your time-honoured name in such close proximity to that of David Laird, we only did so by way of strong antithesis.)—Has David Laird a greater stake in the country than the Havilands, Palmers, Breckens, Longworths, Popes and many other influential Protestants, who are willing to do justice to their Catholic neighbours, while the Patriot clique vainly attempt to stem a torrent of honest public opinion which cannot long be resisted?

The Elder will, as a matter of course, remind us that W. H. Pope outraged common decency and insulted the feelings of Catholics on matters peculiarly dear to them; but Catholics are not so blind or ungenerous as not to admit that a man can always correct and amend the error of his way. Christian charity alone would dictate this course. But was it more mean for W. H. Pope to write the offensive tirades against Catholics, which appeared five or six years ago, than it was for David Laird to publish them to the world, when, we believe, they were not admitted into the columns of any other paper? If W. H. Pope has seen the error of his way and is manfully atoning for past offences, we would advise the pious Elder "to go and do likewise." But no, he has neither the manliness nor moral courage to do so. He would rather be digging up the ashes of the Hamiltons and Wisharts and flinging them in the eyes of the public. Why, if he introduced such topics in respectable Protestant society or among respectable Protestant travellers in a steamer or railway in Scotland he would be trowned down as a nuisance.

David Laird is at least one century behind the age in which he lives. He is the mere relique of a bigoted and by-gone age. His very appearance, gait, address and general bearing all indicate a specimen of the genus homo belonging to an age of dark bigotry, which, through some freak of nature has found its way amongst us. He is quite incorrigible. No matter what we do to enlighten his obtuse mind he will still continue his dirty work; and, like a certain animal, a herd of which an unclean spirit once took possession of, he will go about thrusting his nose into every filth, and where he cannot get the dirty morsel so congenial to his vitiated palate, he will manufacture one for the mere luxury of afterwards swallowing it. He has this consolation however, nature has endowed him with that gift for which he is eminently distinguished. "O, for a neck as long as a Crane's!"

Coroner's Inquest.—An Inquest was held by Dr. Beer, one of the Coroners for Queen's County, on Friday and Saturday last, on view of the body of a sailor, named Cullen, who met his death on Thursday evening, in a back lane near the Jail, having been stabbed by George Stewart Dowey, steward of the Barque "Clara Novello." After examination of a number of witnesses, the Jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against George Stewart Dowey, who was accordingly handed over to take his trial at the Supreme Court.

At a meeting of the members of the Pownal Literary Association, held at Pownal Hall, Lot 49, on Thursday, the 19th ult., for the purpose of electing office bearers. The Annual Report having been read and adopted, and after discussing important matters in connection with the future welfare of the Association, the following gentlemen were elected for the ensuing year:

J. B. Gay, Esq., President, (re-elected.)
R. Smith, Esq., Vice do., (re-elected.)
J. Butler, Esq., Secretary, (re-elected.)
Mr. James J. Gay, Librarian.

Managing Committee, Messrs. James Hayley, J. Mellish, John McEachern, Alex. McNeill and R. Jenkins. During the past year, the Association was well conducted, many subjects affecting the prosperity of the Colony having been debated, in addition to lectures on literary and scientific topics. It is anticipated that past experience, combined with renewed energy, and the use of a suitable circulating Library, will render the approaching season one of the most useful and interesting, that we have yet experienced. The beneficial influences of Literary associations are so well known that we can only express our regret that their formation is not an event of more frequent occurrence. The want of circulating Libraries, in connection with our District schools, is such a barrier in the way of educational progress in P. E. Island, that we hope parents and the friends of education will consider the best means of remedying the evil.—Com to Pat.

The Edinburgh Review for October has been received from the publisher, Lenoard Scott, 140, Fulton Street, New York. The contents are:—1 Sybel's History of the French Revolution—2, Lenor on Ireland—3, Hindoo Fairy Legends—4, Kinglake's Invasion of the Crimea—5, Darwin on Varieties of Animals and Plants—6, The Papacy and the French Empire—7, The Agricultural Laborers of England—8, The Spanish Gipsy—9, The Expiring Parliament. This number of the Review is a very interesting one. The article on Kinglake's invasion of the Crimea, and the Expiring Parliament are well worth the subscription money. The price of this popular Review is only 4$ per annum.

A paragraph appeared in a late number of the Halifax Reporter, stating that the "Summerside Bank" had failed, owing to their connection with the Commercial Bank, of New Brunswick, and S. Scovil. We are assured by the Directors of the Summerside Bank that they had not one dollar of the Commercial Bank paper, nor any connection with that Bank, and that they do not expect to suffer to any extent from Mr. Scovill's failure, and that the condition of the Bank is prosperous, and should command public confidence.—*S. We regret to learn that James Gourlie, son of Mr James Gourlie, of this place, was lost overboard from the ship Robert Godfrey, while on a voyage from Liverpool to Baltimore, on the 18th Oct. He was serving in the capacity of mate. The deceased was much beloved and respected while living in our midst last winter, and his death will be deeply lamented. We sympathize with his family and friends.—S. Journal.

Ship News.

The Bark "Zetland", Marshall, for Bristol, sailed from Richmond Bay, on Wednesday last.—Deal and Oats, by John Yeo, Esq.

The Brig Gem, for Swansea, belonging to Capt. Richards, laden with oats, was ready to leave Malpeque on Wednesday last.

The Steamer Commerce, arrived at this Port Thursday morning, this being her last trip this season.

On Saturday last, a Ship from Richibucto, laden with deal, and bound to Europe, was driven ashore on Pictou Island, in the gale that prevailed that night. On the same night a Sch. went ashore near the Light, in Pictou Harbor. The Bark "Lilly", owned by Messrs. Duncan & Co. of this City, is ashore at Pomket, near Antigonish Harbor, in the Gut of Canso. She is a total wreck, and is advertised for sale, to-morrow, Saturday.

A Brig owned by Messrs. McMullin and Brown, and laden with oats, for Europe, is on the Bar at the entrance of New London Harbor, and should a heavy blow come she will most likely become a wreck. We understand that there are eleven vessels all laden with produce, in New London, windbound, some of them having been detained nearly three weeks.

THE CELEBRATED COMMON SENSE

FAMILY SEWING MACHINE!

Improved and Perfected!

Acknowledged to be the best cheap Family Sewing Machine in the United States.

MANUFACTURED BY A. F. JOHNSTON & Co., BOSTON, MASS.

For Elegance of Finish it has no Rival, high Price or low.

THE Celebrated Common Sense Family Machine is now before the public, with all the improvements that can well be combined in a Sewing Machine. Great labor and pains have been bestowed to bring this machine into the very highest circle in the scale of Sewing Machines. It is acknowledged by the best judges to stand entirely ABOVE AND BEYOND any cheap machine ever produced before. It will sew anything that can be sewed on any high priced Machine in the land, just as nicely and just as rapidly. It will sew from Swiss Muslin up to Beaver Cloth, at the rate of twelve hundred stitches per minute.

Our Machine has a new style of feeding apparatus, which makes the Machine Self-Guiding. The cloth, without the aid of either hand, will run nearly as true as when guided by Barnum's SELF SEWER. This is an advantage not possessed by any other Machine in the world, high price or low. This is one reason why this Machine is so easily managed by children. A girl with one hand can use it more successfully than she could ordinary Machines with two hands.

This Machine will Stitch, Hem, Fell, Tuck, Quilt, Cord, Bind, Braid, and Embroider in a most superior manner.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED FOR FIVE YEARS!

You can cut every second stitch of this sewing and then we will give you a Machine if you can pull the cloth apart without tearing it. It is useless to multiply words, our Machine needs only to be seen to be appreciated.

Flattering Testimonial from the New York Tribune:

The Common Sense Sewing Machine. This is the name of a new candidate for public favor. We have had Sewing Machines many. Some costing enormously and some costing as little as the "Common Sense Machine," but they have most of them passed away because of faulty construction. But few of the higher priced machines retain the confidence of the public. It was the good fortune of the inventor of this machine to combine excellence of construction and excellence of performance with extraordinary cheapness (only twenty dollars), and just the result that might have been expected has been attained. These sewing machines sell rapidly. They give abundant satisfaction. They are acknowledged to stand entirely ahead of any cheap machine ever invented. The thread is laid evenly upon the fabric, and the work holds firmly.—Tribune.

No household complete without our "Great Labor Saving Mackine."
