

New Swiss Discovery F"99"

for Eczemas, Boils, Psoriasis, Leg Ulcers

THE DISCOVERY of one of the main causes of skin diseases will bring new health and happiness to thousands of people suffering from Eczemas, Boils, Leg Ulcers and Psoriasis. Science has established that the lack of unsaturated fatty acids in nutrition reduces the natural resistance of the body and leads to skin disease. As this precious substance—so essential to skin health—is often completely absent in modern food, the number of skin sufferers in all civilized countries has a tendency to increase every year.

These are two of the numerous certified photographs open for inspection at our laboratories.

Authentic Photograph of left leg of Mr. Ernest Fausch on July 1st, suffering from Leg Ulcer for 12 years, before beginning the F"99" Treatment.

Remarkable Discovery
A Swiss chemist, Dr. W. Schmitz, succeeded after 10 years of research work in extracting from pure vegetable oils an unsaturated fatty acid with a concentration of 99% and therefore named F"99". Thanks to this very high purity which was never attained up to now, F"99" is so readily absorbed into the blood stream, that it has a decisive biological activity in the treatment of skin diseases. Its remarkable efficiency has astonished even Skin Specialists of international reputation.

Natural way to clear up skin troubles
F"99" is not a synthetic drug but a concentrate of natural nutritive substances. It is absolutely harmless and may be given even to infants without any hesitation.

As its name suggests, the F"99" Two-Way Treatment acts internally (capsules or liquid) and externally (ointment). While F"99" Ointment treats the external symptoms, F"99" capsules give the body the power to suppress the cause to combat successfully Eczemas, Boils, Leg Ulcers and even Psoriasis. To many thousands of skin sufferers all over the world, F"99" Two-Way Treatment has already proved its tremendous value.

CRESCENT CARNIVAL

By FRANCES PARKISON KEYES (Continued)

Celeste was talking to Anne about Carnival when Olivier brought his car smoothly to a stop in front of a small restaurant on Bourbon Street. The drinks and dishes that appeared as soon as the party was seated were served with a Gallic flourish by a mustachioed waiter, and the little dinner passed off triumphantly.

It would be easier to walk now than to keep getting in and out of the car and parking it on the narrow streets, Olivier explained, as they finally rose from the table. As they stepped out into the street, he offered his arm to Anne with a brief little bow—the lights were inadequate, he said, and the pavements very bad; would she honor him by letting him assist her? She took the offered arm rather self-consciously; but Marie Celeste slipped her warm little hand spontaneously into Breck's, and curled her fingers around his.

"We'll let Olivier lead with Anna, and we'll follow. This is fun, isn't it?"

"I'll say it's fun. I'm having the time of my life."

He said this heartily. The streets were certainly very dark. But, glancing ahead, he could see the animated expression of Anna's face as she turned to Olivier, and in the midst of the confusion he could hear, with relief, the pleasant expression of her voice.

"We're almost to Montefiori's, the first place Olivier planned to stop," Celeste was saying. "We go into his shop first, and pass down a narrow aisle beside the counter. You'll see some porcelain vases shaped like hands, as soon as you go in, with round holes in the palms. You must put a coin in one of those and make a wish. Then Montefiori or his wife or perhaps his daughter will give you a lucky bean to keep and tell you to take your choice of the lighted candles standing on the counter. You may call any one of them yours, though of course you leave it where it is. It will burn for nine hours and after that your wish will come true."

She pressed his hand and then detached her fingers from his as he and she slid, single file, into the entrance of the grocery store.

Breck had given away so many coins to beggars that when he felt for another he could not find one. He took a dollar from his billfold and creased it into a small space as possible. He was relieved when he saw a rap-looking boy and girl, more prosperous in appearance than the others and obviously deeply in love, follow his example by folding a dollar bill and pushing it into the round hole, helping each other to do so.

"What do you suppose they are wishing?" Marie Celeste whispered to him.

"It isn't hard to guess. There's only one thing on earth that would be worth that much to them."

"But you put in a dollar, too!"

"Because I didn't have anything smaller left. But so far as that goes, how do you know I wasn't wishing for the same thing?"

"Because you couldn't be. Not if I understand what you mean. You're married already!"

"Well, don't worry about my wish. Tell me about yours."

"Oh, I couldn't do that! If I did, it wouldn't come true. Come, we must get through this crowd and into the back room. Anna and Olivier are way ahead of us."

The room back of the shop presented an even more extraordinary appearance than the shop itself. At one end of the table was erected a small shrine, enclosing a statue of St. Joseph and encircled with lighted candles and china figurines. But the rest of the table was laden with dishes heaped high with foodstuffs. Anna, who had never before seen so much food of so many different kinds on display all at once, was bothered and bewildered by it. Raising her voice so that she could be heard above the din she asked Olivier questions about it. "I don't understand what all this means."

"Only that at Mi-Caremo, the middle of Lent, it has long been customary to have a break in fasting and some sort of a celebration. If it doesn't interest you, perhaps you would rather go home. After all, these displays are very much alike. When you've seen one, you've seen them all."

"Olivier, how can you say such a thing? They're not in the least alike. I'm sure Anna wants to go to Angelo's at least, and have some spumone before we start home."

"Of course she does. And so do I. Come on, Anna, we're going to Angelo's."

Anna resented having a little chit like Celeste speak so confidently for her, and having her own husband close a question without consulting her. However, she was far from being ready to go home. She gave Breck a withering look

Zion W.M.S. Holds Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held Thursday evening, March 1st, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Webster. The president, Mrs. Rendie Larter, presided.

Following the call to worship, St. Mark's Gospel, ch. 16, verses 1-7, and prayer, the hymn "Approach My Soul the Mercy Seat" was sung, after which Mrs. Hayden MacDonald read the Scripture lesson, St. Luke's Gospel 24, 1-11. The theme: Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. Exposition by Mrs. A. King and prayers by Miss Aitken, Mrs. Angus MacDonald and Mrs. Larter followed. Mrs. Mary MacMillan then read a very interesting missionary paper, "Beautiful Feet," exemplifying the verse of Scripture, "How beautiful upon the mountain are the feet of them that bring glad tidings."

A duet sung by Mrs. Mutch and Mrs. S. MacLean, "When I Think How They Crucified My Lord" was very much enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Mutch read a portion of the Home Missions report of the Women's Missionary Society Eastern Division. The outstanding thought was the Great Commission, the Marching Orders given by Christ to His disciples: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Lo, I am with you always."

After singing a hymn, the business of the meeting was conducted. Roll call was responded to by reciting a Scripture verse. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Reports of committees were given and correspondence read and discussed.

Plans were made for Easter cards to be sent to the sick and afflicted, also Easter envelopes for distribution for Easter offering. The closing hymn, "The Day Of Resurrection" was sung, followed by the Apostles Creed in unison.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was spent and refreshments served. The thanks of the Society were extended to Mr. and Mrs. Webster for their kind hospitality.

which he did not even see, and then she permitted Olivier to escort her expertly from the grocery store.

The Italian ice cream parlor, where he guided them next was, as Celeste had said, entirely different in character from Montefiori's. At this second stopping place, they were confronted by the altar erected in honor of St. Joseph as soon as they entered the door, the little tin tables, which ordinarily occupied the space, having been pushed close together at one side, together with a small stringed orchestra, which was literally pressed against the wall.

Though Breck's loose silver was gone, there were still plenty of dollars in his billfold. He extracted another of these, unobtrusively, and laid a detaining hand on the arm of a hurrying waiter, speaking to him in a low voice at the same time. The waiter instantly paused, and almost immediately afterward a table miraculously became vacant. Celeste sat down and looked up at Breck with admiration.

"You did that beautifully," she said. "Thank you so much. Tell the waiter we all want spumone, won't you?"

Plane Crashes

SIoux CITY, Ia., March 2—(AP)—A mid-continent airline plane, groping for a landing during a heavy snowstorm, crashed and burned today, killing 15 persons.

QUEBEC, March 3—(OP)—Premier Duplessis said recently he has asked the Aluminum Company of Canada to observe strictly an agreement to employ local labor on its new power development at Chute du Diable, on the Peribonka River. The Premier told the public bills committee of the Quebec Legislative Assembly he had received complaints that the company is "employing outsiders—even foreigners"—on the project.

whom I was in love. He would slap me any time I did or said anything he disliked. He never told me he loved me. I just took it for granted. I introduced him to a girl friend of mine and he has married her. Do you think I will ever love again? PUZZLED

ANSWER: If you can love a man who beat you up when you peevied him, and mourn his loss, I should say that your capacity for love was so strong that nothing could stop you from loving any man who came along.

DOROTHY DIX cannot personally reply to readers, but will answer letters of general interest through her column.

lated to Winsome Bluebird, but was a cousin of one of the loveliest of all the Green Forest folk that Farmer Brown's boy knew so well back home, the Scarlet Tanager, he of the glorious scarlet coat and black wings and tail. This new acquaintance was a Tanager in blue instead of scarlet, and in his way just as beautiful. Anyway Farmer Brown's boy thought so. It quite made up for his disappointment in finding that he was mistaken and that this was not his old friend, Winsome Bluebird, who with Mrs. Winsome nests every year in a bird-house he made especially for them.

Then he forgot all about his friends in blue as he watched

Grandpa Pelican dive, come up on the surface of the water, throw his head with its great bill up and back and swallow head first the fish he had caught.

"I'm glad I don't have to swallow my food that way. It isn't dignified," chuckled Farmer Brown's boy.

WINSLOE SOUTH W. M. S.

The Winsloe South W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Gillespie on Feb. 9, to observe the World Day of Prayer. Mrs. Erith Hughes took charge of the devotional period following the theme for this occasion "Perfect Love Casteth Out Fear." The whole program which was very impressive lead to the re-dedication of the members to deeper loyalty and devotion to the great cause of Jesus Christ.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. Roll call was responded by the word "Glory." Mrs. Hughes brought a very full and interesting report of the meeting of Presbyterial which met in Summerside.

The next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Ivan Turner. The devotional period will be in charge of Mrs. Gillespie. This being the Easter meeting the members are asked to give short readings bearing on this very important event in our church calendar. Missionary who will be remembered in prayer is Miss Inman of Trinidad. Roll call will be responded by a verse of scripture containing the word "Love." The meeting closed with the Benediction. Lunch was served by the hostess.
