

Ontario Is Skeptical Of Designated Areas

OTTAWA (Special) — The provinces have agreed to the federal government's new designated area program with something less than wild enthusiasm. The program announced recently by Industry Minister C.M. Dwyer, provides federal grants to industries establishing new plants or enlarging plants in areas of high unemployment and below average income.

But it is clear here that while the provinces have gone along and will be happy with any benefits that accrue, most of them are not dependent on it. More than half the provinces plan to supplement the federal scheme with regional development programs of their own.

While the federal government points with pride to the success of the original designated area plan, the provinces are sceptical. Ontario, for instance, cites the three cases of Brantford, Windsor and the Lakeshore where it says the designated area program received credit for improvement in employment. In reality, it was a sudden boom in major industries already established in these areas that brought about the change.

The Ontario regional development plan is expected to take when they are of short duration," declares Stanley Randall, Ontario's minister of economics and development.

"The only federal designated area in this province is in Muskoka which is the last place in the world to attract industry regardless of the monetary concessions offered. If we suggest these areas be expanded we simply enlarge the criteria on which the federal government based its original decisions. This means other provinces will have more areas designated which would only increase the difficulties of the past."

Ontario is upset at the effort of other provinces to attract industry from Ontario. While Ontario agrees the other provinces need new industry, it urges them to get abroad in their search for it, as Ontario has done, instead of inducing existing industries to transfer from one province to another.

The latter does little for the national good and creates ill feeling between the provinces, Ontario argues. Last year Ontario secured 163 new plants and made 104 licensing agreements, almost all of the originating in the United States.

Canadian North Tour Planned By Soviet Experts

OTTAWA (CP) — A handshake that started last May in Siberia will stretch into the Canadian north next week.

Six Soviet experts in the field of northern development and construction will begin an 18-day, 10,000-mile tour of Canada that will take them as far north as Inuvik in the Mackenzie River delta and set them down for brief stints of city life in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

The Russians will be returning the visit of Northern Affairs Minister Laing who led a Canadian delegation to the U.S.S.R. on an inspection trip of Arctic development during May and June.

Mr. Laing will receive the delegation in Ottawa Aug. 16

Firm Will Supply Fuel Oil To New Homes Via Pipeline

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — A new system to feed furnace oil into private homes through underground pipelines, eliminating the need for bulky oil tanks in basements, is being installed at a suburban housing development.

If it proves successful, it could increase the already hot competition among oil, gas and electricity in the rich home-heating field.

The pipeline system to service 160 homes in Scarborough is being installed by a private company, Domestic Oil Transmission Systems Ltd., which holds patents on the concept.

Although the idea of fuelling private homes by oil pipelines has been talked about for a long time, this is believed to be the first major practical attempt in Canada.

The system, which can be expanded to include another 90 homes, consists of a 15,000-gallon central tank, from which oil will be pumped through buried pipes to the homes. In every home will be a specially designed meter to record the amount of fuel used.

Home-owners will pay the normal local price for the oil—18.1 cents a gallon—but will save the cost of an oil tank as well as gaining the extra space in their basements.

Service burners

The oil company that supplies the central tank will service the oil burners in the homes. In effect, the oil supplier will lease the supply system from Domestic Oil for a 20-year period.

If a homeowner is not satisfied with the service he gets from the oil company, he can disconnect his home from the system, get an oil tank installed and deal with any supplier he wishes.

Ronald B. Cheeseman, president of Domestic Oil, says a system to feed about 150 homes would cost $40,000 to install. He now is negotiating with several other communities for permission to install the system, while he has the green light from some others and is looking around for interested contractors.

Mr. Cheeseman, who has been in the retail oil business for years, says he decided to try to develop the system because of competition from natural gas in the home-heating field.

Gas, he says, has been winning 80 to 85 per cent of homes built in recent years in the Toronto area. A significant factor in the gas sales was the convenience of having the fuel reach the homes by pipeline.

"So I figured if I couldn't lick 'em, I'd better join them."

Vehicle Output Figures Given

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian motor vehicle production for the first seven months of the year was 18.8 per cent higher than during the same period in 1964, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported Tuesday.

The January-July total was 543,977, with 455,191 passenger cars accounting for the bulk. Commercial vehicle production was 23.9 per cent higher than in 1964, at 88,786 units.

July production was 130 per cent higher at 82,065 units over July, 1964—the very large increase caused by the small production during a labor dispute last year.
