Let's Talk It Over A Prince County Viewpoint by "d"

How many of our beliefs and fears have a sound, scientific or rational basis, and how many are baseless and akin to downright superstition? For example, we've never been actually afraid of a thunderstorm, yet we always make it a rule to close all windows during an electric outbreak. On a warm sultry night if we waken when the stabbing flashes of light and the rumbling growl of thunder are in progress, reluctantly, but religiously we get out of bed and put the windows down. This makes the bedroom uncomfortably stuffy but we shouldn't feel safe with those windows open inviting old man Fork Lightning to slither in and close a job on us with his well-known powers of electrocution. A sort of inheritance of fear that has come down to us as a tradition. We lie there and succumb and sometimes when the storm is a particularly stubborn one, we fall into an uneasy sleep before it subsides and the windows remain closed all through the stifling night. We have even wondered why some inventor didn't devise a contraption that would automatically raise the windows when the electric storm is over.

Now we read in a recently published bulletin from the Prince Edward Island Department of Health and Welfare the following: "Don't worry about open door or window as far as leading a lightning stroke into the house is concerned." It continues: "Don't take a bath, don't sit on heating radiators, don't stand in front of open fireplaces, don't handle telephone or radio receivers, don't take refuge under a solitary tree, etc. but—keep your windows open just as much as you wish! We can hardly wait for the next thunder storm to indulge in our new-found freedom.

We're not superstitious. A black cat can cross our path any time, providing it hasn't a white streak up its back. We enjoy planting things in the dark of the moon to show everyone that they grow just as well as the other plants. We go out of our way to walk under ladders. (Some day a careless painter will drape a can of paint around our neck and cure us of this foolish habit.) But this business of closing windows during a thunder storm up to now has always had us in its relentless grip. Not any more. Truly—"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free."

Robertson commented briefly on each character and on each production as a whole. He commended Hilda Jenkins for her use of changes in tempo in "The Spider Ring", and stated he had waited for three nights to see a member of a cast use this effective means of retaining interest. Phillis Britten of the cast of "The Wisdom Tooth" was complimented on her sustained performance, as were Barbara Pickard and Peter Shama of "The Red Key".

Mrs. F. Smallman and Mrs. B. Patterson made presentations of the trophies and prizes, and a silver pin was presented to each member of the winning casts. Refreshments were served by the Parkdale Women's Institute to directors and officials at the end of the evening, and Dr. Shaw made a presentation of two suitable tokens of appreciation to Mr. Robertson. Mrs. F. Gates expressed the appreciation of the Festival Association to the Parkdale W. I. for the many courtesies shown during the Festival.

Casts of plays presented last evening were as follows: "The Spider Ring" by Little Theatre Guild, "Lorna Bellamy" by Mary Moran, "Frank Bellamy" by J. T. Place, "Eileen Smith" by Beverley Place, "Mrs. Bland" by Hilda Jenkins, "Rev. Cuthbert Dinnage" by S. H. Burhoe, and "Henry Page" by C. E. MacArthur. Director—Charles Bentley. Attractive Front On Summerside Business Bldg.

The wooden wall that has been hiding the front of the Crockett Building in Summerside for the past number of weeks has been removed, revealing a new and attractive front of structural glass on the Boates Pharmacy and Crockett's Jewellery Store. Above the windows the store names are inscribed in white lettering on the black glass background. Under the windows is one row of glass blocks. These are lighted from inside at night, giving a very pleasing appearance. The entrance to Boates Pharmacy has been moved and is now on the corner of Water and Summer Streets. The new front is a great improvement and adds to the general appearance of the business section. Its main feature is that it is eye catching and ones attention is drawn to it from a distance.—S.
