GLIMPSE BEHIND THE SCENE,

Colonial Premiers Unanimously Advised Denunciation of the Treaties.

A PROOF OF CANADIAN LOYALTY.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Chamberlain said that at the conference of the colonial premiers and himself a resolution was passed unanimously, the substance being that the premiers of the self-governing colonies heartily recommended the earliest denunciation of the treaties as hampering the trade of Great Britain and her colonies. Thereupon Her Majesty's Government resolved to withdraw the treaties with Germany and Belgium.
In conclusion, Mr. Chamberlain assured the House that the action of Canada in the matter was not a step towards separation, the intention being to show the gratitude and prove the loyalty of the Canadian Government.

THE FAST LINE.

Reported Failure of Promoters.

MONTREAL, Aug. 5.—The Star's London cable says: "On the stock exchange yesterday the question of the Canadian Fast Line was discussed with much freedom and very palpable knowledge. It is believed that the promoters have not succeeded, and will in a very short time be forced to make an intimation to this effect."

THE CHURCH IN COUNCIL.

Lambeth Conference Issues an Encyclical Letter.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The Lambeth Conference has issued an encyclical covering a wide range of subjects. It urges greater activity in the foreign mission field, expresses a wish for increased proselyting among the Jews, and declares strongly in favor of international arbitration.

SUNNYSIDE,

GREGO-TURKISH TROUBLE.

Preparations for a Crisis in Crete.

CANEA, August 5.—On the receipt of the news that a Turkish squadron from the Dardanelles was coming into these waters, the foreign warships got on steam. The international troops on shore have taken measures to anticipate any possible complications. The preparations have greatly excited the musselmen.

MILITIA REORGANIZATION.

The Camp in Charlottetown.

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—The reorganization of the Department of Militia will take place this month. The reorganization affects the accountants of the branch stores, the branch engineers and military branch.

The date of the militia camp in Charlottetown has not yet been fixed for companies 3, 4 and 5 of the 4th Regiment, C. A., and 82nd Battalion.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE AND MAIL

WINNIPEG, Aug. 4.—Ten tramps convicted here could not be imprisoned for lack of jail room, and were sent west to work on the Crow's-Nest Pass road.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 4.—The peace conference was in session three hours yesterday and unexpected progress was made with the negotiations. It is said that everything has been arranged except the question of evacuation of Thessaly, which is to be conditioned tomorrow. It is hoped that a solution of the whole difficulty is now imminent.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—The Star's London cable states: The Irish members opposed in the House of Commons the grant towards the Queen's jubilee, which included the sum for the entertainment of the colonial premiers. On the vote the government sustained it by a large majority.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Morning Post understands that Cecil Rhodes and Alfred Beit, a former member of the board of directors of the British South Africa Chartered Company, have paid the Transvaal government a quarter of a million pounds sterling as indemnity for the Jameson raid.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—According to the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail, the Japanese ambassador to France, M. Sone Arasuka, has explained, in the course of an interview, the subject matter of the forthcoming arbitration between Japan and Hawaii. The ambassador said: "The arbitration will deal only with the question of indemnity for breaches of contract. There is no suggestion of arbitration with the United States because Japan does not recognize that the United States has any right in Hawaii. The ambassador said also that the Dingley bill will ruin Japan's great and growing trade with the United States in carpets."

WHY OF THE CAMERA.

Trouble Experienced In Trying to Get a Snap Shot at Some Squaws.

"They're out here now, just across the street. Where's my kodak? Quick!" The impassioned speaker was one of the lady guests of the Hotel Adams. The place was the hotel lobby. What or who was across the street was a subject of conjecture. Clerk Pierce darted behind his desk. He emerged with a kodak, which the lady breathlessly assured him was loaded for an emergency. She ran out of the lobby, and Mr. Pierce carried the kodak concealed behind him like a wary but inexperienced hunter stalking a deer, as if he wished to disarm the animal of suspicion and convince it that he was approaching with pacific intentions.

The lady relieved Mr. Pierce of the camera. "They," whoever "they" were, were hot visible to the unaided eye. The lady crossed the street to the Gooding building. When she had almost reached the west side of it, a squaw carrying an olla on her head came around the corner. As soon as she saw the kodak she vanished with a scream. The lady with the kodak hadn't time to take a snap shot, but she went on to the corner of the building. She adjusted the kodak and in ten minutes more would have had a negative, but she suddenly turned and ran toward the hotel, pursued by three squaws, each armed with a stick or a club. The squaws turned, ran across the street to a fruit stand and stood in the shade, where they were reasonably protected against kodak assaults.

Mr. Boomer offered himself as a volunteer to procure the picture. He took the kodak and began maneuvering around the squaws, giving them more serious cause for alarm than they already had, for he handled the camera as if it were a shotgun. They remained in the shade, however, turning upon him occasionally, brandishing their sticks.

"Drive them out into the sun!" cried the young lady who had incited the trouble. She stood in a safe place under one of the porches, partly concealed by one of the pillars. "Get on the other side of them and drive them out! Point the camera at them! They're afraid of it!" But they wouldn't drive.

"Why don't you go, Josie, and take their pictures?" asked an elderly lady sitting in a carriage. "I go!" echoed Josie. "I'm afraid of them. Didn't you see them shaking their sticks?"

Finally Mr. Boomer corralled the squaws in the confectionery store. The young lady then went across the street and resumed the kodak. She drew a bead on one of the squaws through an open window. The squaw ran out of the door. The young lady ran to the front of the building, and the squaw ran back and concealed herself behind a doorpost. The young lady moved around and got in range again. The squaw moved out of range. They kept up this game of hide and seek until the sun went down, and the glass upon which that negative was intended to be taken was still clear and unmarked. One of the many superstitions of the Indians is that a photograph brings bad luck. Some of them are induced by gifts to disregard the superstition. It sometimes happens that an Indian whose picture has been taken and placed on exhibition in curio stores dies. His relatives request that the photograph be destroyed or at least removed from sight.—Arizona Republican.

The Humorous Boggar.

Boylan was in the mood to be taken in, if ever. He had eaten a good dinner, lighted a good cigar and stepped out on the front stoop into the first warm evening of a tardy spring.

"Good evening, colonel," spoke a military figure from the sidewalk, coming to a salute.

When a man is already feeling good all over, nothing is so conducive to making him feel better than a respectful salute, with a title prefixed to his name.

"You see how I am fixed, colonel?" said the stranger, stepping up and holding out a right hand, on which were only a thumb and a forefinger.

Boylan looked.

"That is bad," he commented good humoredly.

"But I'll tell you, colonel," confidently. "I know a place where I can get three fingers for 10 cents."

"Give up? I should say I did!" said Boylan, telling the story. "I thought I had something that would have been cheap at 50 cents. There's where I was taken in. I've told the story five times in my ward, and each time somebody has said pensively, 'That's so; you did move here last month.'"

"You see the fellow has already worked the district out."

"But I tell you," said Boylan, kindling. "That fellow doesn't know what a fortune he's got in that hand. I'd like to syndicate him and manage him on a tour of one night stands. So far as the hand goes, it has all the fingers it needs—just enough to pick up a dime—and if the old chap would only hustle, there's millions in it."
