Give Foods A Color Life For Added Enjoyment

COLOR schemes are important for every room in the house; for all the furnishings and the objets d'art, for big and little homes. What a delightful medley of ideas and workable dreams Dorothy Draper has included in her fascinating new book, "Decorating Is Fun."

It sent me scurrying to add more color to the test kitchen, my studio and the dining area, for all rooms need a lift now and then and it is fun to do it.

COLOR FOR FOODS

If Mrs. Draper were sitting here at this moment for afternoon coffee, I am sure she would agree that some foods need a color lift, too.

Their own natural colors may often be enough—the rich, shining brown of roast beef, the brilliant green of salad plants, the gold of squash, carrots, pumpkin, the reds of radishes, tomatoes, pimientoes, the color spectrum of grapes, the yellow, gold, red, rose and orange of fruits—how gorgeous they are!

BRIGHTEN THEM UP

Other foods that may be a bit on the dull side snap into the glamour class when a very little colorful or fresh green garnish or even a dusting of paprika or dot of currant jelly is added.

Not too much for any homemaker to do, when she realizes that the eye does half the eating and that garnishing is fun, too.

Measurements level; recipes for 6

TOMATO-SNOWFLAKE ASPIC

1 recipe tomato aspic (previously columned) or 2 cans ready-to-use tomato aspic
1 c. cottage cheese (baker's or "popcorn" type)

If aspic is not well-seasoned, add few drops each Worcestershire sauce and herb or cider vinegar or lemon juice.

Refrigerate 30 min. or until aspic begins to set and is consistency of raw egg white.

Then with kitchen fork gently strew in the cottage cheese; do not break or mash curds. Distribute throughout to look like snowflakes.

Transfer to 8 in. square pan.

Refrigerate 4 hrs. or until firm enough to cut in square. Unmold on fine-shredded lettuce tossed with not - sweet French dressing.

Tenderize steak, following tenderizer pkg. directions. Pound steak on both sides with meat mallet. Then brush with French dressing; dust with salt and pepper.

Place in oiled pan; brush with butter or margarine; cover.

Bake 8 min. in hot oven, 400 deg. F. for medium rare.

Cut in diagonal (slanting) slices ¼ in. thick. Top with thin slices maitre d' butter.

Garnish with green pepper and pimiento strips.

BRAISED HALVED CARROTS

2 c. boiling water

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Workaday Week Is Picked Up Clean And New

We pick it up clean and new, the first day of our workaday week. Not at all carelessly, claiming it as our due, but gratefully, as a direct gift of Heaven. Rested, refreshed in body and spirit, we enter again our everyday round.

We come on Island farms, like this at Alderlea, which in this modern age, clings to some quaint customs of living, to kindle our fire and set the kettle to boil over the wood-coals; to breakfast Curiosity and the other cats of the tribe that come supplant to our door, and Scample, the dog, before we come to our own. Thrice blest, it would appear, our pets are. Contents of bowls licked up daintily here, they are off then to beg a similar favor at the house across the lane, before going on to the stables and the pan of milk there.

To the out-going ones of the family, they who work away from home, or must otherwise excursion from it, or the student, young or older off to attend the day's classes, we must, we think, interrupt our momentous interests to send them off with a smile.

In a chapter in one of those once much loved Red Pepper Burns' books, we read back in the years, we recall the subsequent remorse of the chief character - the Doctor himself, who concerned over some omission in the nursing care of a young and critically ill patient, openly and heatedly expressed his anger to the careless one in the presence of the sick child. As it happened, "to send the child out into that world beyond, with my curses in his ears."

Kind words, we give those from whom we part for a short or it may be a lengthier interval, so that even an hour, or a day, or indeed our forever, will not be filled with regrets over our lack of thought "for others."

Rain? Yes, a January rain was falling when our students went out this morning. Eves dripped crystals. Streamlets coursed down this slope of valley, in a quest to enter the stream. Crows flew along a hilltop, come from some fastness of winter-shelter, to be well pleased with the mildness obtaining. The stream itself ran dark and swollen, and in freshet it fell from the spillways to the whirlpools below.

"Hear the water this morning!" we said to James at breakfast.

"A real January thaw," he nodded.

"This January, is to say the least, an unusual month," a visitor of the day commented. "Wheels yet used everywhere and anywhere. No snow to clear away from doors or yards. Little frost, you may say. Oh, we had a nip or two but it wasn't continuous. Yes, a remarkable winter, we're having."

"Will there be much snow in February and March?" we queried.

"We never know. In February, it's likely. March is changeable. Odd blizzards we may get. But we can suffer them better then, for we know by the calendar that soon spring is here."

Scampie is indoors at present. Seated, on the rug by James' chair. Obviously not well content there.

"Are you missing someone, Scampie?" James inquires, patting his head. "It was that snowflurry there toward dusk that kept her in town. And it's as well she stayed. Another flurry or two tonight, and there'd be poor travelling in the morning."

Granddaughter is missing from Alderlea tonight, having found kindly shelter with friends in town.

Until tomorrow — — Diary—Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Lonely Spinster Wants To Learn To Enjoy Her Life

Dear Mary Haworth: I feel so alone. My problem is how to adjust myself and get back into social circulation.

I am an only child, now 50. Recently I lost my mother after a lingering illness. For a number of years I had stayed home evenings and weekends after working all day, because I could not leave her alone. We were very close.

During her illness we lost quite a few family friends through death and moving away. Most of the friends my age are married, have children and grandchildren and are busy with lives of their own.

My church has a social club but it is only for 18 to 30-year-olds, which lets me out. I've had quite a bit of pastoral counsel on learning to live alone. I've bought a few clothes and some inexpensive furniture to brighten up my apartment.

My co-workers are all married, leading busy lives. So how does one get off the shelf and back into the world? My activities consist of going to work, to the grocery store and back home to do chores or watch TV.

Saturdays and Sundays seem endless. I've thought of taking a part-time job for the weekends. Any advice would be most welcome. P. K.

Dear P.K.; Getting a part-time job as a volunteer in the field of good works sponsored by the religious denomination to which you belong would probably be a sensible long step towards breaking out of social isolation.

I happen to know that in the city from which you write there are at least two big church-sponsored hospitals, plus an infant and maternity home for unmarried mothers, where church women's groups operate gift shops all week, as a source of revenue in supporting church charities.

These church women are fellow members of your faith and would very likely welcome a recruit to their volunteer sales staff, especially on weekends.

So I suggest that you ask your pastor to put in a telephone call and a good word for you to the proper recruiting authorities in these several shops. Have him vouch for your reliability, availability and eager desire to find something worthwhile to do with your weekend leisure.

In general, volunteers contribute a day or a half-day of work once or twice a month; or oftener if their schedule permits. And contacts thus established in the fellowship of charity usually lead to further opportunities to meet nice people.

Be sure to pray daily, faithfully, for God's help in staying on the beam of His will for you. As he answers your prayers in that regard, you will be wrapped in His peace, wherever you are. M. H.

Dear Mary Haworth: Perhaps this letter of mine will prevent some other woman from making the terrible mistake I made.

Although married to a wonderful man, I fell for an ageold line from a philanderer. After several months of dalliance, I broke with him. Then, after sleepless nights, I confessed the affair to my husband. I saw him age 10 years before my eyes.

He is giving me a second chance, which I don't deserve. I will have to live with this on my conscience the balance of my life. My contrite hope and prayer is that I may justify the faith that my compassionate husband has in me.

If this letter helps just one woman who may be tempted to play the fool, at least there will be that much good to my credit in the "Book of Life." M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

Ever Hear of a "DIURETIC"?

Maybe not. But you should know what a "diuretic" does. There may be times when you should use one. You likely understand how important the kidneys are in maintaining good health. Also that if the kidneys fail to function properly excess acids and waste material remain in the system. This may result in backache, subsequent urinary irritation and bladder discomfort, often followed by backache, tired feeling and disturbed rest.

*Dis-you-ret-ic

Dodd's Pills

This is when the diuretic service of Dodd's Kidney Pills may be helpful. Dodd's act as a diuretic stimulant to help restore normal kidney action, and so relieve the systemic condition causing backache and tired feeling. When you are bothered by backache and tired feeling due to lazy kidney action you can depend on Dodd's Kidney Pills as many thousands have done during the past 70 years. Look for Dodd's at any drug counter. 83
