MONTREAL (CP)—The International Apple Association was told Tuesday that growers, wholesalers and distributors must cooperate in order to maximize sales in the food industry.

Nathan Steinberg, vice-president of Steinberg's Limited grocery stores, addressing the association's annual convention, said: "Your problems are our problems, and our problems are your problems — we are interdependent."

He said retailers must use mass merchandising techniques such as pre-packaging and brand identification and producers must maintain high grade quality.

Discussing the future of the apple industry, convention delegates agreed that a national publicity campaign for apples is needed.

Ben Drew of Wsford, Mass., said the association must finance scientific research of apples and exploit the results.
