BEDTIME STORIES
A Tongue Lashing

A scolding tongue will little gain, But gives to others needless pain —Old Mother Nature.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel has the worst scolding tongue in all the Green Forest. It sometimes seems as if he is happiest when he is scolding loudest. Of course, he sometimes has real reason to scold. But much of the time he scolds just to hear his own voice.

Ever since he opened his eyes this morning he had had a feeling that something was wrong. Either something had happened or was going to happen. It made him so uneasy that he lost his appetite. Now as he sat in the doorway of his home the Black Shadows were gone. Jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun was already well started on his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky. It was very lovely there in the Green Forest. The ground was covered with red and yellow and brown leaves, for Jack Frost and rough Brother Northwind had paid an early visit and shaken off most of the leaves from all the trees excepting those that would stay green all winter. It just didn't seem possible that anything could be wrong. Chatterer just couldn't see any reason for that uneasy feeling that he had had ever since he opened his eyes.

Presently Chatterer heard a sound that caused him to stop scolding. He leaned forward the better to listen. Someone was coming. In a few minutes he saw who it was. It was Farmer Brown.

"Now, what is he coming over here for?" said Chatterer to himself.

A few minutes later he found out what Farmer Brown had come for. He had an axe. He stopped just a little way off and began chopping down a tree. It was a tree that was partly dead. There were several such trees in that part of the Green Forest. In fact, the tree in which Chatterer had his home was partly dead.

Chatterer was out of his home now and over in a tree nearer to where Farmer Brown was at work. Here was a real reason for scolding. Chatterer's tongue went faster than ever. He was giving Farmer Brown a tongue lashing. Yes, sir, he certainly was giving Farmer Brown a tongue lashing. Farmer Brown stopped swinging his axe for a moment and looked over at Chatterer and smiled. Chatterer scolded harder than ever.

"Now what is he coming over here for?" said Chatterer to himself.

"If I could swing an axe as fast as you can use your tongue, it wouldn't take me long to get this job done," chuckled Farmer Brown. Then he went back to work.

It was just as well that Farmer Brown couldn't understand what Chatterer was saying. I fear he was being called bad names. Chatterer was working himself into a rage. The faster his tongue went, the angrier he grew. To him Farmer Brown had no right to cut a tree down. He had no right to be in the Green Forest. Chatterer felt that the Green Forest belonged to the furred and feathered people who lived there, and these two legged folk like Farmer Brown had no right there at all. He was telling Farmer Brown this as his tongue flew. Yes, it was just as well that Farmer Brown didn't know exactly what Chatterer was saying.

C.P. May Apply For Trans-Continental Air Service

MONTREAL (CP) — Prospects emerged Wednesday of competitive trans-continental air service as Canadian Pacific Airlines announced it will apply shortly for permission to compete fully with Trans - Canada Air Lines on the Montreal-Vancouver run.

The application may come before the air transport board within two weeks. If public hearings are deemed necessary, a decision might take two months or more. The decision might be appealed to Transport Minister Hees.

In Ottawa, Mr. Hees said the application is normal and that "the whole air industry has been under intensive review" for some time. Government views would be disclosed in the near future.

Possibility of CPA being granted rights to compete with the federally - owned TCA, sole trans-continental air carriers for 19 years, was considered fairly bright against the background of past Progressive Conservative party views on ending the monopoly.

CPA bid four years ago for a freight franchise—the new application covers all fields—but the Liberal cabinet rejected it.

CPA Chairman W. A. Mather made the application announcement and said traffic rights will be sought at Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. The proposed route would "directly duplicate only 10 per cent of the present inter-city services." A number of the cities concerned would recieve more direct, more frequent service.

A fleet of 15 Super DC-8B airliners was available for the projected domestic service of four east-west flights daily, Mr. Mather said TCA now. "If ever" should be strong enough to meet competition.

TCA SHOWS STRENGTH

TCA last year reported its highest gross revenue, up 18 per cent to $91,306,000 on increased traffic. The surplus was $1,556,000.

Aside from scattered domestic services, CPA has concentrated in the past on its polar route from Sydney, Australia, to Amsterdam, a Vancouver-Hong Kong route and recently - inaugurated flights to Lisbon and Madrid. It has used all piston-powered craft although it expects delivery before year's end of the first Bristol Britannia, a big, long - range turbo-prop plane.

TCA has used turbo-prop Vickers Viscounts to replace four-engined North Stars on domestic runs in the shorter range.

It has Super Constellations for trans-Atlantic use. On order are Vickers Vanguards, bigger medium - range brother of the Viscount, plus DC-8 s, long-range jet airliners.

Looks For Brisk Apple Sales

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Douglas Harkness said in the Commons Friday that Canadian apple growers should have no difficulty in disposing of this year's crop at "relatively-satisfactory prices".

He said in reply to Frank Christian (SC — Okanagan-Boundary) that this year's crop is estimated at 13,400,000 bushels compared to 13,600,000 last year.

A "satisfactory volume" would be sold to Britain and a "significant" amount to Europe. Sales to the United States would be about 1,00,000 bushels.

Mr. Harkness also said two recent shipments of American apples into Canada had been detained for regrading.

Sees Damage In Holding Election Now

OTTAWA (CP) — A prominent Liberal party member said Monday that "a lot of incidental damage" would be caused by holding an election now.

"This is not a time to be talking frivolously about defeating governments and about having elections," J. W. Pickersgill (L—Bonavista - Twillingate) said in the Commons.

He spoke in opposition to a CCF motion of non-confidence in the government which called, in effect, for an immediate start of federal payments under the national hospital insurance plan.

The former immigration minister "said the public "obviously does not want to have an election" at the present time.

If the CCF motion were carried, defeating the government and forcing an election, the matter of hospital insurance would appear to most persons as a side issue "compared with the tremendous problems that face this country at this time."

Mr. Pickersgill's statement that an election would do a lot of incidental damage prompted laughs from Progressive Conservative benches. One Conservative suggested the damage would be to the Liberals.

Mr. Pickersgill replied he had been thinking of the possibility of having no effective government at a time when a major NATO meeting was to be held and when there was "a very serious matter in dispute between the railways and their employees."

Threatens Force To Back Claim

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Sukarno Monday threatened force if the United Nations again rejects negotiations on Indonesia's claim to Dutch West New Guinea (West Irian).

The president told a mass rally sponsored by the government - backed Irian Liberation movement:

"Indonesia must use force if the Irian issue is rejected by the United Nations. We should not beg for Irian's freedom, but we must demand with force."

Debate on the issue is expected to begin Wednesday in the UN General Assembly's political committee. The Netherlands insists Indonesia has no valid claim to the territory.

LINK WITH NATO

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—A link-up between Israel and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is the aim of a visit now being made to European capitals by two Israeli special envoys, reliable sources said Thursday. Alternatively, the envoys were said to be seeking a guarantee by NATO of Israel's security against possible attack by Arab countries under Soviet influence.

ART AUTHORITY DIES

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Francis Henry Taylor, 54, director of the Worcester Art Museum and world renowned in his field, died Friday in hospital. He had been for 15 years director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, before returning in 1950 to the Worcester museum, which he had directed from 1931 to 1940.

Italian Scientist Awarded Nobel Prize For Medicine

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Dr. Daniel Bovet, Italian scientist who helped ease the lot of allergy sufferers with anti-histamines and aided surgical patients with a deadly poison, was awarded the 1957 Nobel Prize for medicine Thursday.

Dr. Bovet adapted curare, used by South American Indians for centuries to poison their darts, for use synthetically as a relaxing anaesthetic in modern surgery.

He was a pioneer in the development of anti-histamines to combat such irritants as hey fever, rash, eczema and asthma.

Now he is studying the effect of tranquillizers on human beings.

Sweden's Royal Caroline Institute of Medicine made the award, which carries a cash prize of about $42,000 from the foundation established by Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite.

Dr. Bovet was recovering from Asian flu at his home in Rome when he got the official notification from Sweden's ambassador to Italy, Eric Von Post. The lean, slightly built Swiss-born scientist, 50, was happily overwhelmed.

GREAT SURPRISE

"It was a great surprise. I did not even know I was a candidate."

Up from his bed, he went with his wife and co-worker, Mrs. Philomena Nitti Bovet, to the Italian Superiod Health Institute, where he heads the pharmacology department. White-robed colleagues congratulated him, grasping his hand and clapping him on the back.

Among those who greeted him was biochemist Ernest Boris Chain, a German-born British subject who won the Nobel Prize for medicine in 1945 and now directs one of the institute's divisions.

Lester B. Pearson, former Canadian external affairs minister, has been given the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize and Albert Camus of France the prize for literature.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
