HOW TO CURE BEEF.

Make and Keep Beef For Home Use In Winter.

Mrs. Charles writes in The Rural New Yorker:

I have just been interviewing Mr. Charles, my better and larger half, in regard to the young steer he has been stall feeding for several weeks and was glad to hear that he would soon be in good condition for killing, weather permitting, and I know he will make delicious eating.

He was selected from a herd of 40 steers bought in Buffalo last June and was pasture fed till about six weeks ago. Since then he has been kept constantly in the stable, fed on a diet of pumpkins, cornmeal, bran and clover hay. We killed two such animals last winter and certainly never had such superior beef in the house—rich, juicy and tender as young chicken. The manner in which we disposed of our beeves last winter proved so satisfactory that I will describe it, thinking others may find some suggestions which will prove helpful to them.

As soon as we are likely to have steady cold weather the steer will be slaughtered. One fore quarter and one hind quarter will be sold to neighboring farmers, who are always glad to avail themselves of an opportunity to get such choice meat at so much lower than retail prices. The fore quarter reserved for ourselves, after hanging a week or two, we shall cut up and pack in a 20 gallon crock for corning. Each piece is thoroughly rubbed with the following mixture and then packed as solidly as possible in the large crock or jar: Four quarts of rock salt, 4 pounds of brown sugar, 4 ounces of saltpeter to 100 pounds of beef.

These jars are far superior to barrels for this purpose, as they can be kept much sweeter, and the jar cannot absorb the juices of the meat as a barrel would. No water is needed, as the beef juices will prove sufficient after a few days' standing. A 20 gallon jar will hold about 150 pounds of meat. Corn beef prepared in this way will keep several months in cool weather, though I think the meat fibers are hardened and toughened after, say, two months.

I canned corned beef in glass fruit jars last winter very successfully, opening them in midsummer. The remaining hind quarter is hung in the large, airy garret over the woodshed, where it generally freezes. A steak or roast is cut off as desired. In favorable weather the meat will keep two months if desirable, improving in quality every day.

What Is Anthrax?

This definition is given in bulletin No. 10 of the Delaware experiment station:

Anthrax is a disease which affects all domestic animals. Carnivora or flesh eaters—dogs, for instance—enjoy, it is true, a high degree of protection against it, but at times they, too, succumb. Man himself is quite susceptible, and sheep, goats, horned cattle and horses are especially liable to contract it. The result depends upon the portion of the body that is affected.

If the poison passes through the stomach and develops in the intestines, death follows. If, in the case of man, a wound on the hand or leg gives the poison entrance into the body, then malignant postules form. Oftentimes such patients recover—possibly one in five may die. The same can be said of horned stock, but sheep and goats, with one or two curious exceptions, have little or no resisting powers, and anthrax once in a flock oftentimes claims one-half as victims.

The cause of this disease is a plant too small by far to be seen by the naked eye. Under the microscope it looks like a rod possibly five times as long as it is thick. Five thousand of these rods put end to end might measure one inch in length. This rodlike plant goes to seed under certain circumstances—a point to be remembered—for it is this peculiarity which gives to it almost unlimited power for causing losses, for these seeds can stand both heat and cold and can lie for years in a dry place without loss of vitality. A combination of heat, moisture and food, such as the animal body offers, may cause the seed to germinate and develop an epidemic anew.

Once within the animal body, anthrax plants multiply without seed formation, and if they cause the death of the animal and it is buried without dissection or mutilation, which would allow air to come into contact with the blood, then in a short time the plant dies, and nothing remains to generate future trouble. Almost invariably, however, immediately after death blood exudes from all the natural openings of the carcass of an anthrax victim. Such blood does not coagulate. It may sink readily into the soil or may spread over it in broad pools, offering ample opportunity for aeration and for seed formation within a relatively few hours.

Live Stock Points.

Fall planted rye for the winter and spring pasture of the lambs is one of the most satisfactory and paying of crops.

Now is the time to set the broiling machines, otherwise incubators, going.

Colonel F. D. Coburn says there is no necessity for a boar's being a sluggish, stupid, half idiotic, chuckle headed chump. A boar can be tractable and still have abundant life and activity.

Use gumption in your feeding methods. Get rid of the old superstition that it is wicked to feed wheat to stock. When wheat is only 40 cents a bushel, pork 5 cents, and butter 25 cents a pound, turn wheat into pork and butter instead of selling it at 40 cents.

Wheat is excellent as concentrated food for all live stock.

The Breeder's Gazette is down on the "well nigh obsolete" score card as used by judges at fairs. The Gazette observes that it has not been used in the cattle ring of a western show yard in 10 years, and that swine breeders have recovered thoroughly from the score card fever. It wisely shows up the "folly of attempting to apply mathematics to the judging of life."

THE HOUSEHOLD

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Points About Carpet Mending of Interest to the Economically Minded.

Brussels and other nap carpets may be pieced so neatly that the seam almost escapes notice. In order to do this the parts to be joined, having been carefully matched as to pattern, should be trimmed smoothly, following the line of the weft. Next buttonhole the edges carefully with carpet thread of a color as near as possible the wool of the carpet. Stitches must be taken evenly on wrong side through at least two threads of the weft, taking care not to entangle and flatten or to ravel wool on the edges. When this is done, overhand together on wrong side the two buttonholed edges, and if the work is done neatly when the carpet is tacked down the seam will be perfectly smooth. By the ingenious and capable sewer pieces may be so inserted where holes or ineradicable spots have been as to defy scrutiny, and the otherwise condemned carpet may be rendered useful for at least another year.

Stair carpets so treated will be entirely without the lumpy seams so disagreeable to the tread, and which so soon present a gray, faded ridge destitute of wool.

When carpets have been worn in spots or lines so that the gray weft is exposed, temporary relief may be had by applying liquid dyes with a small paint brush, using colors nearest the wool of the carpet.

A pretty badly worn stair carpet was made quite presentable by a skillful treatment with colors used for painting on bolting cloth. Only two applications during the year were necessary, and this ingenious frescoing stood admirably the test of frequent dusting and brushing. Care should be taken not to drop the staining liquid in large spots. If not sufficiently colored, allow to dry and repeat treatment next day. Colored inks of various shades are also useful in this direction, according to a writer in Harper's Bazar, who gives the foregoing practical information.

graduated flounce of lace is caught up a the sides with loops and ends of satin ribbon corresponding with the one which hides the wall hook and depending from the center of the twist holder.

New England Pie of the Real Sort.

In New England there is pie for the morning meal, and the whole hearted farmer boasts, "I may not be as forehanded as some, but I've never seen my breakfast table without pie." Henry Ward Beecher never did a grander deed than when he sang the glories of apple pie. And there are other kinds of pie. Pumpkin pie, made in the proportion of a cupful of pumpkin to a pint of milk, with a beaten egg and a dainty flavoring of spice, baked in a crust which hardened a bit in the oven while the mixing went on; mince pie which is not the tough little mass of jellied citron and candied orange peel, baked in the shape of what the small girls calls a "turniper" and supplied with sirup through a hole in the top crust in a way unpleasantly suggestive of a lamp being fed with oil, as are the mince pies of England.

In this land the housewife adds to one-third of minced apple two-thirds of chopped and cooked lean beef, puts in a cupful of molasses for each pie, adds a soupcon of brandy if she doesn't belong to the W. C. T. U., and some cold, black coffee if she does, spreads the filling on the crust, sticks it full of plump raisins and covers it with a delicate blanket of dough crimped on the edges with a fork. It is baked almost as lengthy a time as the Peterkins' quince sauce was cooked, "as long as the fire lasts and then better be put on the next day," and it's more than worth eating when done, writes one who celebrates in Good Housekeeping the praise of New England cookery.

Ammonia as a Carpet Cleaner.

If you wish to clean and brighten your carpets after they have been beaten and put down, wipe with a cloth wrung from water, to which a little ammonia has been added. A tablespoonful of ammonia in a gallon of water will often restore colors in carpets. It will also remove whitewash stains from them. In fact, the housekeeper has no better help than her bottle of ammonia.

Cold Slaw.

One head of fine white cabbage, minced fine; 3 hard boiled eggs; 2 tablespoonfuls salad oil; 2 teaspoonfuls white sugar; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 teaspoonful pepper; 1 teaspoonful made mustard; 1 teacupful vinegar. Mix and pour upon the chopped cabbage.

Rabbit Stew.

Joint rabbits, fry in hot bacon fat with one sliced onion. Cover with one quart of boiling water, add one sweet pepper cut small, three cloves, salt and pepper. Simmer till meat tender, thicken with a little flour and add chopped parsley.

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from sores, having only the scars to show where they had been.
