

The Kleener's Kloset
By Ed Orlowski

Well, well, lookie here Crummie, what's this out here?

Crummy is the hook shaped handle mop with a zig-zag snorkel stomping bud-letts of the retractable handle family.

As soon as the Kloset door was open, the Crummies munchies started sapping the floor, sure enough, she could smell goodies on the floor, well, she didn't have long expectations before she knew it, she was snuffeling chocolate chip cookies, and you could heat the yummiie factory going here last nigght.

After Crummie, who is the hook shaped handled mop, with a zig-zag snorkel stomping budletts, of the retractable handle family, finished her treat of a treatment on the floor the Kleener picked her up, while she was still chomping and set her (the baby that she is, on "Engineering Charlie's", baby weighing scale...."Engineering Charlie is the do-dad man, steady elevator boy, from the first to the third floor Duffy machine Shop, specializing in do-dads, what's who's and splashy spindles, anyway thanks "Engineering Charlie" for the use of your scale.

With the Kleeners exaggeration, Crummie, the cookie snorkeler weighed exactly twenty-one pounds, or 9534 grams more than when the Kleener snuffled her out of the Kloset.

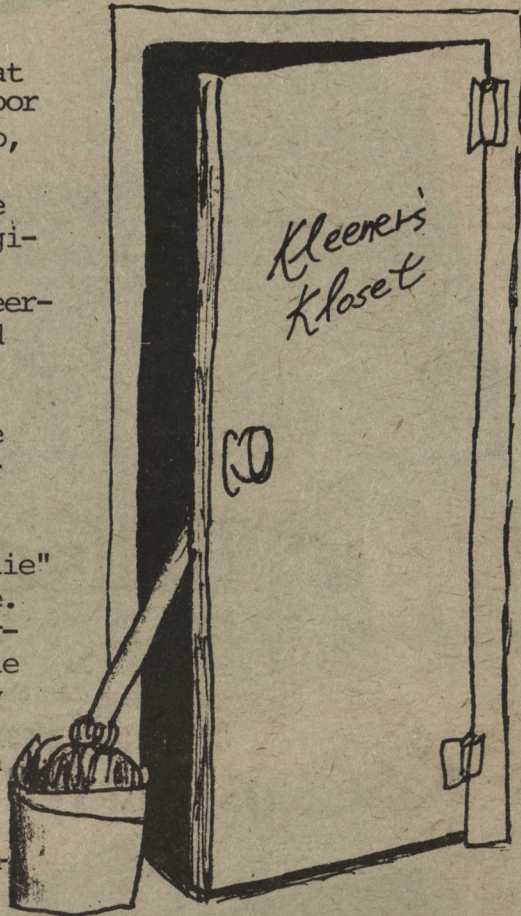

Both the Kleener and Crummie knew Smirfs were involved in making of the cookies in Engineering Room 1111 last night, as there were teaspoon sized foot prints just everywhere, especially on the walls, and light-fixtures, and grape-sized hand prints too.

What else can one expect from a smurf, as everyone in the broom kloset knows that each smurf is exactly three apples tall, or 15 thimbles slonchwise, Tis quite exciting to know that the Engineers have the little people working with them, and it gives us a closeteers some status, that we are just not any ordinary mops...eh? And the public some of that insight, as to why these people that they call Engineers are so creative. Still it kept the Kleener wondering why?, the Engineers used a lazer to cut up three pappa bear bathtubs, and when they took the peices and.....

"Crummy", interjected,

"Hey Kleener, it's time to close the Klosit for today, You'll see it all in the morning, and what you don't see, I'll fill you in on" Thank you Crummie, " It's mighty neighbourly and crummie of you to be so thoughtful."

SENIOR CLASS MEETS

The Senior Class met on Tuesday evening at 6:00 to view displays by Baily and Heckbert Studios. There was a secret-ballot vote afterwards and Heckbert Studios were awarded the privilege of taking the Class of '83's grad pictures. A date will be announced shortly for when the sittings will be held. So stay tuned and look for a poster in the library lounge stating when you can sign up for a sitting time. A special thanks to all you seniors (all 24 of you) who showed interest for this important aspect of your graduation.

Your '83 exec.

The Animals Can't

Animals often suffer because people delay in reporting abuse and neglect. Some of these animals die needlessly.

If you know of an animal being treated cruelly, call your local animal agency at the number below. Your anonymity is guaranteed.

Don't wait until it's too late to report animal cruelty. The animals can't wait much longer for help—their lives depend on you.
