Let's Talk It Over

On a number of occasions poor showing in the higher centres of learning has been explained by asserting that pupils are being specially trained for the entrance examinations, and are thus able to pass them without having a sufficiently mature background of education to continue their success in the advanced work of the junior and senior colleges.

If this is true, and we believe there is some truth in such a claim, then it would seem that those who draft the entrance examinations, and evaluate the answers, are, at least, partly to blame. It is not possible to set examinations to test a pupil's educational background? Perhaps the fault lies in placing too much emphasis on questions which demand only the setting down of memorized information, and not enough on questions, the answers to which will reveal the comparative mastery of skills by the pupils. It is sometimes surprising the marks memorization slaves can achieve in certain school subjects without knowing very much about the subject at all.

That those "sudden death" written examinations, like our Prince of Wales entrance tests, Maritime Board exams, and other similar ones, leave much to be desired as detectors of the pupils' real positions in the educational derby is pretty well accepted by most modern educators. There are too many "stock" questions for teachers to coach their charges on, for one thing, and the premium is too high on memorization, which is, of course, a beneficial exercise if not carried to extremes. Too much of it puts the student in a condition comparable to the musician-athlete who spent too much time on callisthenics, and too little on skills.

Matthews banged in two quick goals to end the period 2-0 for the home team. Despite hard defensive playing by the O'Leary Sisters the Elmsdale girls could not be stopped as they swarmed around their opponents' net in the last period, June Fraser and Anna Ramsay both tallying to end the game 4-0 for Elmsdale. Referees, Orville Willis and Mike Kinch. Lineups: Elmsdale Sisters - Goal, Thelma Wells; defense, B. Adams, J. Froitt; forwards, R. Adams, N. Matthews, H. Millman, D. Adams, A. Ramsay, J. Fraser, R. S'side Fire Department Holds Regular Meeting

A regular meeting of the Summerside Fire Department was held last night in the Town Hall with Chief Abdon Arsenault in the chair. Arthur Corne reported on fire films and Chief Arsenault said that he had been talking to Fire Marshal Campbell, who had advised that fire films were available at short notice.

The matter of careless parking by motorists at theatre exits was given considerable attention. The problem had been brought to the attention of the Fire Chief by both the theatre managers. It was the opinion of the meeting that this was a matter for the Police Department as it involved the question of parking and therefore was something that should be attended to and settled by the police. Malcolm Steele, George Hogg, Jack Schurman and Chief Arsenault expressed the opinion that the new police committee of the Town Council should check regularly with the police on this matter. It was the general opinion of the meeting that should a serious fire occur in the theatres while a film was being shown that the Fire Department would be subject to blame and not the police.

Labor Critical

Continued from page 1 - model uses a .28 shell, while the Belgian rifle is a 30-calibre weapon, using standard NATO forces shells. Churchill said the opposition was trying to "work up prejudice and hostility and partisanship" to cover up its 1951 mistake. The British rifle, he said, was a fine piece of work, but it would have been fatal to adopt it in isolation from the other NATO weapons.
