Folks Are Usually Glad To Arrive Home Again

So here, across the hilltops of this morning, was dawned a Monday in a week bright and new. A wind of the west was in the trees. A fine day, would it be? "Sun and cloud today," James presently repeated the forecast. And indoors, the sunshine caught the tablecloth we had spread, and without, a west wind was in the treetops.

And the Queen, bless her, and her Prince, were on the last lap of their journey, homing from their Caribbean visit - soon to be safely past every hazard of the way, back to home and family and loved ones again. We suspect that wherever it is that dwelling which is Home, be it in castle or cottage - or farmhouse, its folks are always well pleased to return to it, to enter upon the familiar paths once more; to take up the old round.

Tables are spread. Meals enjoyed. Duties - and how extremely trying must be, all in all, those of a Queen! - done. Day turns to night. Sleep comes. We doubt that it is more sweet in a palace than in our loved homes.

Not more so, we are sure, than in an Island farmhouse, especially through the summery seasons when fragrances of fields and trees come in at an open window, on a little night breeze, with the silence without deep and wide.

This morning too, the sealing fleet was off to "do business in," and above "deep waters", to secure for femininity the makings of milady's velvety fur-coat.

"From our house, we watch the cod-fishing fleet go off to the fishing grounds" we recalled - an N. B. woman, a summer-guest to the Island back in the years, relate. "And the children are so happy to see the

Wife Disagrees That Dad Should Rule The Roost

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to make a few comments on your reply to the man who objects to his working wife's taking a summer trip to Hawaii on an office recruiting assignment. He gave her permission for one such trip, to San Francisco, and thinks that is enough.

Without knowing the circumstances, I accept your judgment that his current objections are sound; that the wife probably shouldn't be leaving her family (they have school-age children in favor of a "bonus" type outing.

You say it is just as well that the husband is "putting a foot down". I agree that family responsibilities should come first even though, conditions favoring an occasional holiday is good for everyone concerned.

Feeling loved and needed, however, usually is enough to bring a wife at home. And your image of the husband's "putting a foot down", casts him in the role of two-year-old.

As a wife who has loved, honored and cherished her husband for 30 years, I find it hard to understand how a "love, honor and obey" concept of marriage can be the basis for a full relationship between two mature persons. Sincerely,

DEAR V. S.: Whether literal or allegorical in substance, the Biblical concept that Eve was fashioned from Adam's rib suggests that, in the creative intent, she symbolizes the heart area, rather than the head area, of their at-one-ment, or unity relationship.

It is axiomatic that a house divided will fall. And it is a

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP)—A former stenographer says servicing cars for a living is more fun than developing stenography's spread in an office.

Blonde Shirley Morrison and Nancy Alexander, a five-foot brunette ex-waitress, work for a service station chain in this southwestern Ontario city. The example was set at another Chatham station by attractive Mrs. Joseph Birch, who has been working for her husband for 10 years. She now has Rosetta Allitt, a former elevator operator, as co-worker.

Girls are apparently good for business in this traditionally male preserve. The service station chain that employs Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Alexander has women attendants in sta-

Oatmeal yeast bread tastes as good as it looks and smells. It is one of America's finest breads, nutritionally speaking richer in protein value than many other yeast breads because of the high protein content of the rolled oats used. It tastes even better the day after it is baked.

Measurements level; recipes for 6 OATMEAL YEAST BREAD 2 cakes compressed or 2 pkg. dry yeast 1/2 c. tepid water 1 1/2 c. milk, scalded 3/4 c. sugar 2 tsp. salt 1/4 c. shortening 4 to 4 1/2 c. sifted flour 2 c. rolled oats (quick or old fashioned uncooked) 2 tsp. melted shortening 1 tsp. melted butter Soften yeast in tepid water. (Use warmer water for dry yeast.) Pour scalded milk over combined sugar, salt and shortening; stir occasionally until shortening melts. Cool until tepid. Stir in 1 c. of flour; add softened yeast and oats. Stir in enough of flour to make a soft dough that can be handled (up to 3 1/2 c.)

Turn out on lightly floured surface; knead 10 min. or until smooth and satiny. Round dough into a ball; place in oiled bowl; brush lightly with melted shortening. Cover and let rise in warm place 1 hr. or until doubled in size.

Punch down dough; cover; let rest 10 min. Divide dough into halves. Shape each half to form loaf. Place seam-side down in two oiled 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2 loaf pans. Brush each loaf lightly with melted shortening; cover; let rise 45 min. or until nearly double in size.
