Democratic Campaign Seen Well Organized

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Democratic presidential campaign is well organized and ready to go under a split-level big-name command of Johnson men and Kennedy Democrats. The Democratic national committee is the focal point for the campaign and the campaign committee—at the next level below—will be headed by Johnson men and Kennedy Democrats. 30 Per Cent Of U.S. Voters Reported Still Undecided

By ARCH KAMENZIE WASHINGTON (CP)—President Johnson and Senator Barry Goldwater have set official starting dates for their election campaigns. In fact, they are both already well on the road to the November showdown in what is expected to be an unusually fluid and probably bitter campaign.

Johnson as a 24-hour-a-day politician seems adequately active for a professional non-campaigner. LASHED BACK He has been having a steady round of dinners with large and influential groups and a number of press conferences. He has lashed back at Goldwater's allegations concerning what weapons were specified for U.S. air strikes against North Viet Nam. The Republican senator says now will be starting the national committee. In fact, they already have on a part-time basis.

Brien wrote the 1960 Democratic campaign manual and is the author of the 1964 version. For Kennedy and Johnson, he was chief liaison man with Congress. Now he will be director of organization for the Democrats as he was in the 1960 Kennedy drive to victory. O'Donnell handed appointments for Kennedy and for the national committee he will handle the entire operation. He will concentrate on such big states as New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and California.

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy was reported to have been offered and had turned down a prominent campaign role. But Johnson apparently is not worried unduly that there might be some dissatisfaction by Democrats who had hoped Kennedy would be tapped for the party's vice-presidential nomination.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

depending on how the opponent's cards are distributed and on how you choose to play the hand. It is highly unlikely that West has the ace of diamonds, so you duck the queen, also the jack, and then bluff the ace of diamonds. Your initial hope that the ace would fall and establish the suit as a trick does not materialize.
