Pure Spices are Profitable

But bad spice is abominable. This is a truism that no competent housekeeper should forget. Half the trouble of cooking is past if you get the right brand of Spice, and while there are many that are fairly good, it is always safest to take one which is invariably uniform. That one is

NOTED FOR BEAUTY.

One Characteristic of the Schoolteachers of Washington.

"I'll tell you one thing," said the young man stenographer from the west who got his job in one of the departments recently and who has been noticing things pretty carefully since he came to Washington, "this burg's got the prettiest set of school-teachers I ever saw anywhere, and that's no lie. Out where I come from, say, the schoolteachers have got faces as hard as mallets and glassy stares and a general freezy way about 'em that makes a fellow that meets up with one of 'em feel like he's about 7 years old in the third grade all over again. And, honest, they all seem to me to be about 85 years old at that. It's the same in a whole lot of other big towns in the south and west that I've worked in. Well, when I struck this town a friend of mine took me to his boarding house that's right next door to a big schoolhouse. My room's a second story front room and commands a view of the entrance to the school, and, say, the second morning that I was there I looked out of the window just about a quarter of an hour before school 'took in,' and, gee whizz! I saw a procession of pretty, fresh looking, swell, stylishly dressed young women a-stroeling up the steps of that schoolhouse that made me think I was taking an Easter Sunday turnout.

"Say," says I to my roommate, who's a Washington man born and bred, 'what do you make of this parade of almighty pretty girls a-walking up those school-house steps? Is it a high school, and are they pupils, or what the dickens, anyhow?' "Pupils nothing," says he. 'They're teachers.'

"Well, I gave him the hoot, of course, but he stuck to it so seriously that I of course had to believe him.

"Well," says I to him finally, 'they're the pick of all the schoolteachers in town, then, sent down here because it's a down town schoolhouse, just to impress visitors.'

"Not much they ain't," says he. 'All the schoolteachers in this town are pretty enough to eat and just as nice as they are pretty. There ain't anything but fine looking folks living in Washington, anyhow,' says he.

"Well, say, I didn't believe him when he said that all the teachers in all the schools were just as attractive as those I had seen, and so the next morning, before office hours, we hustled around on our bikes to three schools just before school 'took in,' and blamed if I saw a single teacher in the lot that wasn't pretty and sweet looking enough for a fellow to marry out of hand on the spot. I wrote home and told my sisters out west about this, and they've been writing back to me and telling me that I'm in a trance and must be mistaken. But I'm not mistaken. I don't want to see any nicer looking girls than the schoolteachers of this town, and you hear me a-talking." — Washington Star.

He Invited His Fate.

An incident that pointed a strong moral took place on Chestnut street. The street was thronged with promenaders, and the magnificent St. Bernard dog which a young woman was leading attracted much attention. Near Thirteenth street the woman entered a store, leaving the dog outside. The dog was such a magnificent beast that several people stopped in admiration, and the dog actually seemed to smile at the attention he was receiving. About this time two giddy youths, who were followed by a mischievous fox terrier, came along and paused to see what was attracting the throng. The terrier, which was but a mite beside the St. Bernard, rushed in and began snarling at the big dog. The noble looking beast paid not the slightest attention, and the youths audibly commented on the big one's cowardice.

When the terrier began snapping at his feet, however, the big one gravely raised one paw and pushed his tormenter away. This angered the terrier, and its anger was fed by the youths, who told Jip, as they called him, to go in and "shake the big coward." Jip went in and set his teeth in the St. Bernard's leg. Suddenly the big dog lost his forbearance, and in a trice Jip was in its massive jaws. There was a crunching sound, a couple of shakes and Jip was cast aside dead. The St. Bernard then resumed his place unconcerned, and the young men gathered up their dead terrier and went off to make complaint at the city hall.—Philadelphia Record.

Books That Have Helped Mark Twain.

The Critic says that Mark Twain has reached the terrible frankness of maturity and fame, and "tells tales like Bismarck, regardless whom he hits, so long as the blow is deserved." The example given is this Pudd'nhead Wilson sentence at the beginning of a chapter in his latest book: "She was not what you would call refined; she was not what you would call unrefined. She was the kind of woman who keeps a parrot."

That is indeed an illuminating instance of the working of Mark's mind. A private letter from Mr. Clemens to a friend in New York who is interested in statistics affords an analogous example of candor in this passage:

"The books which have most influenced my life! With pleasure. This is the list: 'The Innocents Abroad,' 'Roughing It,' 'Tramp Abroad,' 'Prince and Pauper,' 'Huckleberry Finn,' 'Tom Sawyer,' 'Yankee at the Court of Prince Arthur,' 'Personal Reminiscences of Joan of Arc,' 'Pudd'nhead Wilson,' 'Following the Equator,' and the publications of the late firm of Charles L. Webster & Co."

Yes, and that voracious story book, 'The Jumping Frog,' the predecessor of all the works named, and possibly the most influential of the lot — Harper's Weekly.

Hindoo First Steps in English.

A native has been caught at Calcutta scaling the wall of the premises into the compound of No. 3, Chowringhi, dressed in a complete suit of European clothes. The man had, on the previous evening, concealed himself inside a shop, and had employed his time till morning in fitting himself with a complete suit of clothes, including a white shirt, with studs and links, a red tie, carefully put on, black socks, a pair of boots, a watch and chain, handkerchief and even a pocketknife, with a straw hat and stick. He even went the length of writing his name inside the hat. On being caught, he said he wanted to learn English, and as a preliminary step thought it best to dress himself in sahib's clothes.—Bombay (India) Advocate.

Judged by Appearances.

You cannot afford to wear slop clothing. It is a weakness of human nature to judge by appearances. Even a dog will bark at a tramp while a well dressed man will pass by unmolested. It pays to wear

Shorey's Ready-to-Wear Clothing.

For several Reasons:
First. You feel yourself to be a better man.
Secondly. You look a better man.
Thirdly. Your fellow-man respects you.
Fourthly. It is Ready-to-wear and you can choose, try on, and suit yourself from stock, without the uncertainty of an ordered garment. And lastly, you will find a little Guarantee Card in the pocket, which means "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Refunded."

Does the combination of Reasons appeal to your judgment?
