Herb Elliot of Australia, the world's fastest skier on foot, tried his hand at a new sport in Toronto where he was guest at a benefit dinner for crippled children. The result — a cloud of snow and flying hickory. Elliot admitted he was shaky but said it was fun to ski in Canada. (CP Wirephoto)

Extra End Game Features Bonspiel Play Yesterday

With a slim chance of raising his own rock, bumping the Bell rock against his, Doug Cameron was inches off the target on his last throw and the Myron Bell rink held their number one rock nestled in the blue behind the cordon of guards to score one point in the extra end and defeat the Jiggs rink 11-10.

Doctor Wendell MacDonald's rink beat the Summerside foursome, skipped by Freddie Folland, in the other championship game of the nine o'clock draw. MacDonald was ahead 8-1 at the bottom of the seventh end but the Folland curlers drew up to 8-6 with two ends to go.

Twice the doctor was in real trouble with five rocks counting on one end and three in another but the victorious skip scored double-knockouts on each occasion to cut Folland down to counts of 3 and 1. The Charlottetown rink scored three points in the last two ends to win 11-6.

Yesterday's championship play left only two rinks undefeated, the Myron Bell rink with 4 victories and the Dr. MacDonald rink with 3.

Joe Brown Retains Title In Decision Over Busso

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Joe Brown, a moving phantom with a thunderous right, knocked down Johnny Busso of New York in the ninth round, made his face a gory mask and went on to a 15-round unanimous decision in retaining his world lightweight championship Wednesday night.

It was the sixth defence of the 33-year-old Brown's title in those two years. The fight was even more decisive than the last one, the decision here over Kenny Lane last July.

DEADLY RIGHT Busso, a strong young man who pressed the fight all the way, couldn't stay away from that deadly right.

Busso's nose bled from the third round on. In the 14th Brown opened a cut on his cheek and in the final round Busso was fighting with his left eye almost closed.

The knockdown in the ninth came on a hard right counter punch. It knocked Busso over the ropes onto the ring apron. He climbed back immediately and took after Brown, indicating he wasn't badly hurt.

Brown weighed 134 for the televised fight. Busso weighed in at 135.

CHASED BROWN Busso chased Brown much of the way and landed plenty of blows but few of them were effective. But the New York boy was missing more than he landed. He appeared very tired in the last two rounds while Brown looked about as fresh as when he started.

Brown fought with a grin on his face most of the time while Busso was a grim youngster—his only 24, and is supposed to be the strongest challenger Brown has met.

SPORTS ECHOES

Summerside Curling Club is the mecca this week of curling lovers from Charlottetown, Montague, Alberton, the local RCAF station, and of course, from Summerside itself.

Looking through the large windows at the participants on the ice is like looking at a sports picture in technicolor. The ice between the hog lines is an olive green, and the large "house" circles a colorful contrast in red and black.

The ceiling and walls support the brilliant motif, and the general effect is pleasing even if you are a rank no-nothing about curling, and was under the impression that the "hog line" was just some of the boys queuing up for lunch, and a knockout shot was "one too many."

If you know the bare rudiments of the game, as we do, but none of the finer points, sit behind or in front of some of the veterans and listen to them as they discuss the shots before they are delivered, as they are being swept down the ice, and after they shoot their bolt. It is extremely interesting, and we imagine, if you listen long enough, you will get an insight into the game, making it more enjoyable to watch.

As we write this, the Jiggs MacDonald, Dr. Wen MacDonald, Myron Bell and Freddie Folland-skipped rinks are the only ones undefeated. As you read it, some of these curling giants will probably have come crashing down from the heights of supposed invincibility. It is possible, but improbable that one of the rinks which has tasted defeat once may lick its wounds and then turn around and lick the "big four" to capture the crown in a thrilling uphill battle. Curling like other sports, has its upsets, but some of those undefeated rinks look mighty hard to up-end.

The players, press, and other guests were treated to a delicious turkey banquet Tuesday evening, in the course of which Earl Canon, president of the Summerside Curling Club, welcomed the visiting curlers. It was a genial get-together, emphasizing that the social side of curling is as important to the success of the enterprise as the competitive.

It is interesting to note that some of the schoolboy curlers of a few years back are contributing their share in the success of the undefeated rinks.
