SEARCHERS FIND BODY OF MISSING WOMAN

Summerside Detachment of RCMP with the assistance of a number of volunteers from the Wilnot and Summerside East area, yesterday afternoon found the body of Mrs. Leigh (Lea) Simmonds, Summerside East who had been missing since Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Simmonds, 42, was reported missing Wednesday night and was the subject of an intensive search by RCMP here. The search was directed in the Wilnot shore area because Wednesday night, the missing woman's shoes were found on the beach.

The search was under the direction of Sgt. William L. Hildrow, NCO in charge of the Summerside Detachment of the RCMP.

The body was taken to Summerside by Bowens Funeral Home. Last night was transferred to Charlottetown where an autopsy will be performed this morning by order of coroner Dr. Marvin Clark of Kensington.

The results of the autopsy will determine whether or not an inquest will be held. The deceased is survived by her husband, Leigh, a daughter, Joan, nursing in Summerside, and a son, Walter, R. as well as a sister, Beatrice in Churchville, P.E.I., and two brothers Tom and Earl Crippell in Summerside.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

British Bookies Take Heavy Loss

LONDON (AP)—Bewildered British bookies are considering limiting bets on dog races after a brilliantly organized betting coup threatened them with losses of at least £100,000.

The bookmakers refused to pay off and are busy working out plans to prevent similar coups in the future.

The coup was pulled off Tuesday at a small suburban dog racing track by a ruthless efficient syndicate. It was staged on the parimutuel forecast pool, where bettors try to pick the winners and second dogs in a six-dog field.

The gang bet heavily on 24 combinations they expected to lose, thus building up a big parimutuel pool. On the remaining six combinations—covering three dogs—they took only one ticket each. The result was that the parimutuel odds paid a fantastic $872-to-1.

More than 30 tough-looking men monopolized the 31 betting windows at the track keeping most other bettors from affecting the odds. Meanwhile, other members of the gang placed bets with bookies throughout Britain on the winning combination.

Ch'town Men Are Injured

Ch'town Men Are Injured
Sterling Edward Mahar, 48, of Central Street, Charlottetown, suffered broken ribs in an accident that occurred at Fort Augustus Wednesday afternoon. He is under observation in the Charlottetown Hospital.

RCMP said yesterday that the accident occurred when a truck driven by Mr. Mahar left the road and rolled in a ditch after failing to make a sharp turn.

A passenger, Morris Burns, Cumberland St., Charlottetown received stitches for cuts to his lip and back of the head. A third passenger, Douglas Strickland, King Street, was shaken up, but received no injuries. Both were released from hospital following treatment.

50 YEARS AGO Error Cancelled Out Error Sarajevo Assassination

BY BORIS BOSKOVIC
SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP)—Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand's driver took a wrong turn in this town 50 years ago and a 700-foot Bosnian revolutionist named Gavrilo Princip was in the wrong place.

These two errors added up to the shots fired on a Sarajevo bridge a half-century ago that took the life of the emperor of Austria and created hatred that led to the Second World War.

There is little here now to recall the tumult of the day 50 years ago Sunday when the heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne was shot dead, with his wife, while on a state visit to Sarajevo.

A few observances were arranged by historians, who formed a committee for July 23, the anniversary of the Sarajevo assassination.

The bomb landed in the folded-back canvas top of the car and the archduke is said to have pushed it out into the street. It exploded, wounding one of the archduke's aides in a following car.

After the city hall reception, the angered archduke insisted on changing his formal schedule and driving to the hospital to visit his wounded aide. On that route the car would not have passed near Princip. But the driver took a wrong turn and had to turn back.

The assassin, meanwhile, had left his hiding place along the scheduled route and just by chance happened to be at the spot, killing the archduke and his wife.

The assassin, meanwhile, had left his hiding place along the scheduled route and just by chance happened to be at the spot, killing the archduke and his wife.

Princip, then 19, was seized at the scene. He tried to commit suicide by swallowing cyanide but the poison didn't work. Four years later he died in prison. Three fellow conspirators were executed.

ERRORS SPELLED SUCCESS

ERRORS SPELLED SUCCESS
Students of the assassination call it a muddled plot which succeeded only because of two errors. Early on the assassination day, a bomb was hurled at the archduke's car as he rode through arched streets to a welcome at the city hall.

Canadian Shows Concern On Length Of Cyprus Term

BY PETER BUCKLEY
NICOSIA (CP)—The commanding officer of the Canadian contingent serving with the United Nations force on Cyprus said he would like to see professional Canadian soldiers left indefinitely on the island.

It would sort of dilute their ability to do anything, he said, he said.

Col. Edward A. C. Amy, 46, of Kentville, N.S., and flew to Nicosia to mark the anniversary of the Second World War and Korea. He was director of program Canada to keep the peace in Cyprus.

In a Dominion Day interview, Col. Amy reviewed the first three months of the Canadian participation on Cyprus and said some of the difficulties faced by the force were the need for more military and diplomatic, even un-

"I don't know what would happen to a soldier left too long in this environment—or anyone else in the United Nations commitment were they, we could get a training program going to keep the men up to snuff. But because of the nature of the job and the need for more troops, it hasn't been possible up to now."

The colonel cited "two forces at play" which affect the role of the Canadian soldier and his morale.

"One is boredom, that is being forced to sit around a great deal. And there is tension, that is being present in an area of hostility and being unable to do something like ham in a sandlot. For this reason, I think it's important for a soldier to be yanked out once a month and given respite from all responsibilities."

Most Canadian troops have been given eight to 10 hour leaves to visit the seashore reefs of Famagusta and Canadian headquarters in Cyprus now is seeking alternative arrangements for week-long leaves in Beirut.

Col. Amy described the business of keeping Canadian morale up as "a problem, but not a serious problem," and indicated that a recent Canadian government decision to rotate troops after six months has helped to eliminate the major morale factor, uncertainty about the length of stay on Cyprus.

If he was concerned about particular problems facing Canadian troops on Cyprus, Col. Amy also saw advantages.

"It's a more difficult operation than usual for a soldier to get into, in ordinary circumstances, a professional soldier knows the enemy and knows what he has to do. He knows the enemy, just friends, and this requires him to exercise impartiality and judgment."

After United Nations exercises.
