Welcome once again to my weekly column. Schitzee (S-K-I-T-Z-E-E) is the name and psychopathology is the game. Ha ha ha haaaaaa.

Psychopathology means don't look before you leap — in other words, it's one who follows someone else's nutty life-style.

I believe I was talking last week about how I invented the ... the ... - ± + × = † ... Burrp ... I just had a fit of indigestion ... those little monsters.

Rumour has it or I take it that everyone knows that beavers use their tails to slap the water in the event of danger, right? WRONG!

Those ... slim devils use their tails as a built-in counter-weight balance so that they can stagger home in a straight line.

And not only that, but when the beaver gets home, he or she has a party and used the tail as a serving tray for beer.

Sigh. How they have evolved.

You have to watch it when one of the ... the ... (sigh of relief) those little runts goes schizoid. (Schizoid means uncontrollable fits.

If you're standing near one and it goes schizoid, LOOK OUT.

It rolls around your feet in somersaults and at the same time grunts and snorts some kind of Pig Latin.

Then without warning the little monster jumps your head height (how low can you get), twists its body, and swings its tail — SMACK — right across the face.

After regaining consciousness, if your shoes are still intact, you are in no immediate danger.

But, ... if you are wearing running shoes, BEWARE! The little runt goes snaky when it smells the foot fetish aroma of rubber.

The Arabian Skunk (my pet name) literally gnaws the sweaty rubber soles off your feet.

Not only that, but it will put the rubber shavings under its pillow at night for good luck.

I'm not superstitious, they are. When you are sprinting away whatever footwear you have left, the little monster will sit back on its tail and cry like a big baby, saying that it wants to play some more.

Isn't that a sign of Freud's regression state??

Correct me if I'm wrong, hah hah hah.

Next week I will tell you how this li ... lit ... litt ... = † † † @ † † × !!! ... little infamous runt got on the famous 5 cent piece.

Patriotic or what!

Child suffers from name

By Derrick Webber

Once upon a time, long, long ago, there was a little girl named 'Get me the Hell out of this'.

Now, she was the first to admit that her name was a bit unusual but Get Me The Hell Out Of This liked it and didn't want it changed at all.

Admittedly she was a bit strange.

She owed her strange name to her father, Get Me The (who was of Slavic descent) and the family name was simply This.

Her father married a nice girl from a town down the way who was called Out (her last name was Andabout but I'll steer clear of that story) and their first child they decided they'd name after the father regardless of sex.

And so it was that Get Me The Hell Out Of This was named. The part 'Hell Out Of' is her middle name, in honour of a great grandmother on the mother's side.

You can just imagine the problems poor Get Me The Hell Out Of This had in school. On the first day the teacher made everyone say their name out loud to the class and when it got to be our heroine's turn the teacher made Get Me The Hell Out Of This stand in the corner for saying such filth.

The problems continued as she grew up. Whenever Get Me The Hell Out Of This introduced herself the immediate reply was "What?". Either she was always misunderstood or people were asking her what she wanted to get out of.

It was a very hard life.

Now, when you think about your life — all the hardships you have to face, the problems that it seems you were born into having, think about poor little Get Me The Hell Out Of This and all the problems she had to go through — the years of pain, hardship and suffering, and it might, just might, if you are very lucky, make you feel a whole lot worse.
