

MRS. EVA BAGNELL, Red Cross nurse's assistant with Galt Flanagan of Charlottetown as she completes her third donation to the blood bank. The new plastic bag, which is now being used to collect and transfuse the blood, is attached to a scale which automatically shuts off when the required weight is collected. Last night's clinic at the Confederation Centre picked up considerably as far as numbers in attendance and speed were concerned as compared with the previous night. Today's clinic hours are 9 - 11 this morning, and 7 - 9 this evening.

Blood Donor Registration Is Shade Short Of Goal

Yesterday a registration of 124 at the afternoon session, and 178 in the evening brought the total for the first two days of this week's Red Cross blood donor clinics for Charlottetown and the surrounding area to within one of the goal set for the two days and recouped 32 of the deficit of 33 which occurred at Monday's sessions.

It is hoped that there will be an even better response at today's sessions between 9 - 11 this morning and 7 - 9 this evening, and tomorrow from 9 - 11 and 7 - 9 when the addition of two extra beds should speed up the proceedings.

The girls at Prince of Wales College are again in the lead in the competition between the two sexes and Fremont Archer, chairman of the Red Cross blood donor committee for Charlottetown, noted a gratifying response from PWC students at yesterday's sessions.

He addressed a student assembly at PWC yesterday morning when he presented the trophy which is up for competition between the boys and the girls to Patsy Neal, chairman of this year's blood donor committee at PWC, who accepted it on behalf of the girls who came out "on top" at last April's clinics.

CLINIC HELPERS
Helpers at yesterday's clinics were drawn from the following organizations: Central Christian Ladies' Aid, Southport CWL, Junior League of the City Hospital, York Women's Institute and Queen Charlotte High School Red Cross Council.

Red Cross officials expressed satisfaction with splendid turnout at yesterday's clinics and at improved speed with which the donors went through.

Provincial Legislature Will Meet In November

By LORNE YEO

A special session of the Legislature has been set for early November to deal with final requirements of the Liberal platform and to provide additional money for highway construction.

Premier Alex Campbell last night stated that the government, up until now, has been waiting for the Federal government in co-operation with the provinces to establish the date for the plenary session of the tax structure committee which has been scheduled for October 24.

"We do not propose to introduce a great deal of legislation at the special session although legislation will be offered creating the separate portfolio of labor and authorizing the appointment of a minister without portfolio," said the Premier.

IS NECESSARY

Premier Campbell said he felt the special session is necessary to authorize the large expenditure of money required for free school text books, supplementary allowances for old age pensioners, and additional monies required in highway construction, which he stated: "were not provided by the last session of the Legislature."

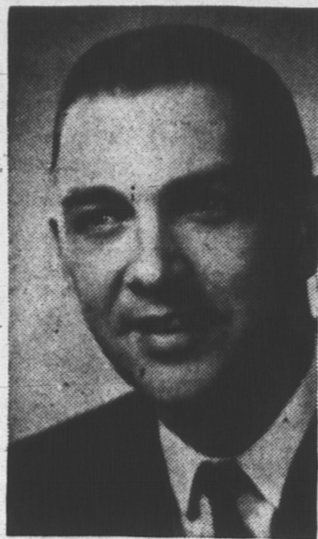

The first part of the conference on the 24th will deal with the subject of education and is expected to continue through the entire week.

Accompanying the Premier to Ottawa will be Hon. T. Earle Hickey, provincial secretary and treasurer; Douglas Dennis, deputy provincial treasurer; William Massey, co-ordinator of federal-provincial fiscal relations. It is possible that Hon. Gordon Bennett, minister of education, will attend also.

LEAVE TODAY

Mr. Massey and Mr. Dennis leave this morning for Ottawa where they will spend three days in consultation with the tax structure committee. It was learned from Premier Campbell who also stated that he expects to attend the national Liberal conference in Ottawa which starts October 16 and lasts for three days.

In connection with this conference, and tomorrow from 9 - 11 and 7 - 9 when the addition of two extra beds should speed up the proceedings.

Various means of incorporating black representation in the Rhodesian administration were discussed but Smith was reported to have balked at the idea of providing for unimpeded progress towards majority rule which would in time turn the government over to the Negroes.

Bowden and Jones not only held talks with Smith but also with other representatives of Rhodesian opinion. Amid these discussions, Smith's reference to his belief that "the end is in sight" in the long British-Rhodesian dispute raised optimism in many quarters but it did not convince British experts in London.

He said that the enterprise developed almost into a community effort and that additional preferred shares will be offered later in the fall to the public.

The new units will be the same in design as in the present units, and the motel was originally constructed to handle the addition, if and when it came.

Mr. Linkletter, who also operates a tourist agency here, said yesterday that the tourist trade was good this year, about the same as last, and with early expectations of a banner year, he feels that if the rail strike had not come off, the season would have broken all records.

How to get help in any emergency

POLICE, FIRE, AMBULANCE and POISON CONTROL CENTRE numbers are listed on the inside front cover of most Telephone Directories. If they are not listed or if the nature of the emergency is such that you cannot wait to complete a call, DIAL "0" (Zero) for Operator and say "EMERGENCY." Give the operator the details of the emergency, particularly the street address. Your operator is trained to give you personalized, immediate help in any emergency situation.

Prepare for Emergencies.

The best way to obtain help in an emergency is to be prepared, well in advance. List all emergency and other important numbers on the NUMBER FINDER page at the front of your Telephone Directory. The page may then be removed and kept near your telephone.

Ask for Free Personal Directory.

If you'd like a small, handy booklet in which to keep important phone numbers, just call the Telephone Business Office and ask for a Personal Telephone Directory.

If you can't find the numbers in an emergency—or you're not sure whom to call—SIMPLY DIAL THE OPERATOR. In the dial, just feel for the last opening in the dial, next to the finger stop.
