

Thrilling Piano Recital Given By Miss Ireland

The second in the current series of Prince of Wales College concerts was given in the College auditorium last night, the recitalist being Miss Margaret Ann Ireland, brilliant young Canadian pianist, who is a native of Winnipeg.

Only twenty-three years of age, Miss Ireland plays with ripe maturity and with a grace and spontaneity which made her extremely difficult programme seem so easy of accomplishment. Certainly it was a most enjoyable and refreshing performance, judged from every standpoint.

A highlight in the programme was her beautiful interpretation of the Sonata in F Flat Minor, Op. 35, by Chopin. Divorced from its setting, the Funeral March in this sonata is the most familiar of all compositions of its kind, but its pathos is tremendously enhanced by the contrast with the preceding and final movements, and it is not surprising that this work has held its own for more than a century with music lovers.

A perhaps still more difficult test of musicianship was Miss Ireland's opening number, the Organ Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, by J. S. Bach, in which her keyboard mastery was shown convincingly in the noble polyphonic melodies.

This was followed by three short pieces by Brahms, listed merely as Intermezzi in the programme notes.

New to the audience, and warmly received, was a composition entitled Fantasy in D Minor, which the composer, Oscar Morawitz, now teaching in the Toronto Conservatory, dedicated personally to Miss Ireland.

Her concluding numbers included the Liebestraum, by Liszt, and three stimulating selections from the work of a contemporary Brazilian composer, Hector Villa-Lobos. She also responded graciously to encores.

It is hoped that means will be found of bringing Miss Ireland here again in the near future, as she is undoubtedly on the eve of a career of outstanding prominence among the world's gifted artists.

Family Allowance Payments Over $2,000,000 For P. E. I.

Over $2,000,000 in family allowances have been paid out to children in Prince Edward Island during the past ten months, it was learned yesterday from Major Allan Nicholson, Director of Family Allowances for the Province. $2,061,192 were paid out by the Department from March 1 to Dec. 31 in 1950. Complete figures for the department's fiscal year which concludes on March 31 are of course not available. Total payment for the year are expected to reach two and a half million dollars.

The figures of the past ten months in comparison with the same ten months in 1949 show an increase of $53,438 in family allowance payments. $1,997,754 were paid out to eligible children from March to December in 1949.

Close to 13,500 families with a total of over 34,000 children have received monthly benefits during the past year. During the month of December 34,195 children were granted allowances.

A comparison of the payments in the months of December 1949 and 1950 show that $4,162 more were paid in December 1950 than in December 1949.

In December 1949 the department paid out $202,499 on behalf of 13,177 families for a total of 33,384 children. This amounted to an average of $6.06 per child and $3.03 per week.

The figures for December 1950 show that the department paid out $206,661 to 13,358 families for a total of 34,195 children. The average payment per child was $6.04 and per family $15.47.

The number of allowances paid have increased considerably during the past few years, stated Major Nicholson. The size of the staff on the other hand has been reduced from 26 to 14 members.

Overpayments
Major Nicholson also referred to the recent press reports which stated that there were $42,862 uncollectable overpayments in the Dominion and that $481,174 in overpayments had been made since 1945.

The total uncollectable overpayments in the Province amounts to $47, he stated. They comprise two accounts, one of $37 for forgery and another of $10. This, he added speaks well for the efficiency of the staff.

Allowances are paid to children from the time of birth to sixteen years. The two primary qualifications for payment are maintenance of the children by parents and school attendance in accordance to Provincial regulations.

Monthly allowances paid during the past ten months with the figures for the corresponding months in 1949 in brackets are as follows: March, $202,853. ($192,439); April, $203,630. ($192,294); May, $204,372. ($204,523); June, $204,045. ($192,287); July, $205,125. ($199,806); August, $206, 013. ($201,919); September, $206,356. ($201,871); October, $206,381. ($202,318); November, $205,756. ($201,818); December, $206,661. ($202,499).

sive grain policy, is not attractive. "With feed grains operating at a high level of cost, there should be the utmost care in the securing of good seed if our farm producers are to become more or less self-sufficient and save large amounts of money through an increase in grain production per acre.

"Every seed plant operator or owner in the Province should immediately see to it that seed cleaning equipment has the proper sieves and is adjusted so that weed seeds and poor grains are taken out in the grading process. I have seen some of these machines in operation and they were not being operated with proper sieves. I have also seen good hand turned graders that were equipped only for blowing chaff and straw out of the grain. Why not get the proper sieves and do the job right?"

Good Seed Available
"There are quantities of good seed grain available in this Province. Quotations on No. 1 and No. 2 seed oats through a mainland brokerage firm indicate fairly stiff prices, namely over $5.00 per hundred pound sack. Commercial No. 1 and No. 2 seed barley is $2.55 per bushel with Registered Government No. 1 or No. 2 seed wheat $2.84 per bushel. These varieties do not include some of the favoured varieties of barley and wheat grown here. These quotations are for carlots.

"Good seed grain can be secured, however, in our own Province direct from supplies at cheaper rates than this. The high prices quoted are due in part to the fact that Western seed oats is a matter of fact being shipped from Prince Edward Island to Western centers. "Do not let your grains get away from you. Protect your own supplies adequately. From the same source we have the following quotations on feed grains: No. 1 feed oats $3.38 per hundred pounds in bags; 2nds, No. 3CW $3.59 per 100 pounds; feed wheat $3.21; barleymeal $6.70 per ton. These are in carlots.

Local Quotations
"Local quotations delivered Charlottetown in bulk are as follows: "No. 1 feed barley delivered bulk is quoted at $3.25 for middle of March to May delivery. For immediate delivery a premium above this rate would have to be charged. No. 1 feed oats is $3.12 bulk; No. 1 feed wheat $2.99. Millfeeds are ranging about the same level as last week and in comparison with whole grains are really cheaper, but nevertheless not cheap on the basis of their own analysis.

"Local grain is getting scarce and there seems to be a reluctance to quote. It is urged, however, that parties having grain for sale should get in touch with local centres of demand for use of their grain in our Province rather than export. Orlake is almost impossible to secure.

"Soybean meal is quoted at $5.10 in carlot, delivered, which almost places it beyond the realm of practicality in feeding.

"Fishmeal is almost impossible to secure and even molasses has taken a jump upward to 45c per gallon basis Montreal. Ontario corn is quoted at $1.47, bulk, delivered. Under conditions of high feeding prices, producers should be aware of any special mixtures placed on the market unless they are accompanied with a proper statement of sources of origin, of feeds included, and the digestibility of these feeds. At a time like this low grade mixtures may very well be placed on the market under attractive names and under special prices which may in the final analysis be exceptionally profitable to the dealer.

Death In City Last Night Of Mrs. George Ryan

The death occurred in this City last evening of Mrs. Henrietta Seaman Ryan, wife of George S. Ryan, retired C.N.R. Conductor. She had been in poor health for the past two years, but it was felt that perhaps there was a chance for recovery, but such was not the case. She bore her long illness with patience and the end came suddenly and without pain.

Born at Ellerslie, P. E. Island she came to Charlottetown in 1906 to train for nursing in the P. E. Island Hospital where she graduated in 1909, and for short periods had been relieving matron. After this she did professional nursing for some years until 1917 when she married and settled down in this City. She was well known as a splendid housewife always ready to assist in any worthy cause, charitable or otherwise.

She leaves to mourn her husband in this City together with two sisters, Mrs. Janie MacCaull at Summerside and Mrs. Bruce Wallace at Rumford Falls, Maine; two brothers Robert G. and Aldred at Ellerslie; as well as a number of nephews and nieces.

She was a charter member of the Registered Nurses Association and took a deep interest in the advancement of the nursing profession.

Her funeral will be from the MacLean Funeral Home on Sunday afternoon, the 20th inst., service starting at two p.m. Burial will be at Sherwood Cemetery.

CONTRADICTORY

Bell, K.C., counsel for the defence, the witness said Howatt called at her home every day. William Howatt had been at the Weeks' home when she and Mrs. Weeks had left around two o'clock. She had left about 3:30. She had gone back in the evening to see the Weeks on business. The prisoner was drunk when she arrived there and she did not see Mrs. Lee or her daughter. She did not see Howatt after she left shortly before nine.

The witness also denied that Mrs. Weeks and the prisoner had walked home with her. The only time she had been upstairs in the 'W's' new home was when Mrs. Weeks had shown her through.

At the conclusion of his cross-examination of Mrs. Steele, Mr. Bell requested permission to call Elleen, 14-year-old daughter of accused in rebuttal of Mrs. Steele's evidence. Mr. Campbell objected, stating rebuttal could only be allowed when evidence is to be rebutted not known before the case commenced.

The request by Mr. Bell was denied by Justice Tweedy.

Prisoner Takes The Stand
William Weeks, on trial for the murder of James Mullins on December 5, testified at considerable length in his own defence.

He stated he was 40 years of age and had been in jail since his arrest on December 5. He left school when he was 12 or 13 years of age and had gone to work. The prisoner then told of the various jobs he had had, and of buying a car and purchasing a new home on Gerald Kent last year. From the age of 19 to 21 he had been in bed, and was treated at that time for a heart ailment.

Of recent years he had not been able to go to church because of dizziness and nervousness. On the street he was slight except at certain times such as when he took part in funeral processions. The last steady employment he had was at L. M. Poole's which he left last June. Since then he had done some gardening work for Mr. Baker, retired contractor, and at other times had worked around his house doing general repairs.

His income in addition to the work he was able to do was $13.50 from unemployment insurance.

Went Together
Prisoner said his wife and he usually went together to collect the unemployment insurance and on December 4 had gone down about ten minutes past ten in the morning. The unemployment office had given him his cheque and told him to report for work that afternoon behind Bevan Bros. where a new building was being built. He cashed his cheque at the Bank of Montreal and gave the money to his wife.

Drank Another Bottle
Prisoner stated he drank another bottle of bay rum which had been by the hall rack and soon afterwards left the house. He thought it was then nine o'clock or soon after. At that time he had two dollars and some change which he had taken from his wife's purse. (The purse had been under a cushion on the couch in the front room).

He still had one bottle of bay rum in his pocket and walked down town to the Capitol Theatre corner. Prisoner said he then walked towards the Post Office and a fellow he did not know very well called him by name. The man was in a blue suit and had a hat. He was then between the Post Office and the Colonial Building. They walked together between the Market Building and the Library and he drank his bottle of bay rum. The other man had a bottle of bay rum of his own which he drank.

The two of them then walked up Queen Street to Douglas and then along Douglas toward Ekn Avenue. At Mullins' house the other man went in to the yard and entered the house by the back door. The prisoner said he stayed outside. After five or ten minutes the man came out and they walked towards Prisoner said he had answered "Yes." He had then told the officer about the Frenchman and told him he had killed Mullins.

Prisoner was then taken to the police station. He had not been in bed that night. Soon afterwards he was taken into the Chief's office where he made a statement. The Chief had written the statement out and he had signed it. He had previously signed a warning which had been read to him, and had no objection in either case. He had not objected when they took his photograph.

Asked by Mr. Bell about the marks on his face, the prisoner said the one on his forehead was an old one made in his cellar, and the mark on his nose might have been caused when he fell that evening on Gerald Street.

Referring to the statement of Roma Steele that she had been in the motor with him, the prisoner denied it. He said he had had no trouble with Mullins, had not been in Mullins' house that evening previous to going there with McGonnell, and had not killed him.

The prisoner stated he had applied for entry into the Canadian Army twice but was turned down because of medical unfitness. He could not pronounce the medical term for his affliction but said it meant fits. A certificate, dated 1941, was introduced stating the prisoner was subject to epilepsy.

In answer to cross examination by Mr. Campbell, the prisoner said he remembered everything that happened the night of December 4, and did not get fits when drinking but talked and acted wildly.

He said liquor began to get the best of him about six years ago, and eventually he preferred shako to government liquor. He admitted to being a shako addict, and that he would do nearly anything for a drink of shako. The prisoner said he had eventually lost his last steady job (last June) because of a needle he had been given by Dr. Lea after a drinking bout.

Asked where he got the money he spent for alcohol, the prisoner said he had always turned his regular pay envelopes over to his sister, losing his job because of this. He said he had sometimes borrowed small amounts from friends but had always paid them back.

Questioned about the reason he did not go to work when he got a job after six months unemployment, the prisoner said he did not like to go ten minutes late and had decided to go the next morning.

The cross-examination of the accused was resumed after lunch, and the prisoner then said he had left his home for work shortly before one o'clock. When he got downtown it had been ten past one, and he thought his clock at home must have been wrong.

Asked For Four Dollars
The payment for the jack which he had taken to Mr. Kelly was first mentioned when he took it to Kelly's garage. He had asked four dollars for it and had eventually received one dollar and four bottles of bay rum. The value of the bottles he received was thirty-five cents each. The prisoner said he was fairly full when he left his home about nine o'clock in the evening, and was staggering and falling. After he had been out in the air for a while the effects of the liquor died down a bit. He was then going for some lunch and had had two hours later. He had first gone straight down town, and although his mind had wandered from the lunch a bit, he had not forgotten it.

Mr. Campbell remarked to the prisoner on his excellent memory of everything that happened that night and suggested to him that during the two hours he was getting pretty sober.

The prisoner answered that he was still drunk. The only thing he could not remember was what kind of pie he had eaten at the Northern Luncheon.

Asked when he got the money during his wife's purse, he said it was while Mrs. Lee's hand was turned. Mr. Campbell suggested this pointed to the fact he was not drunk at the time.

The prosecution then asked the prisoner why, if he was innocent, he had not gone to the police with McGonnell to report Mullins' death. The prisoner answered that he was not sure the man was dead, which Mr. Campbell reminded him he had told McGonnell he was.

The prisoner was then asked about his long acquaintance with the deceased and if he was not one of his closer friends. The prisoner stated he was, and was then asked

After the prisoner got home he said he was worried about what the Frenchman had told him on Douglas Street. Later Howatt came in and the prisoner was still worrying about the Frenchman's statement. He talked to his wife about it and soon afterwards Howatt left and then returned with McGonnell and others. After a conversation with McGonnell about Mr. Mullins the two of them left and went to Mullins' house. Prisoner said he was there because of what he had been told by the Frenchman. When they got to Mullins' he went in while McGonnell stayed outside.

Prisoner walked in the house and struck a match, and then another. He saw Mullins on the floor and stooped over and lifted his left hand. He could not swear he was dead. Prisoner went out and told McGonnell what he had seen and they went back to the prisoner's home. McGonnell left him there and he waited until McGonnell returned with the police. Sgt. McPhail asked him if he knew anything of Mullins' death and the prisoner said he had answered "Yes." He had then told the officer about the Frenchman and told him he had killed Mullins.

Prisoner was then taken to the police station. He had not been in bed that night. Soon afterwards he was taken into the Chief's office where he made a statement. The Chief had written the statement out and he had signed it. He had previously signed a warning which had been read to him, and had no objection in either case.
