

Three Homers By Walls Cause Of Dodgers Upset

Lee Walls belted three homers and drove in eight runs Thursday as Chicago Cubs stomped on Los Angeles Dodgers 15-2 before 10,194 shocked fans at Los Angeles Coliseum.

Walls hit all his homers over the 40-foot-high left-field screen 250 feet from home plate.

In the American League Kansas City took over second place from Detroit on an easy 7-2 victory over the Tigers at Kansas City. First-place New York was rained out at Washington.

Chicago White Sox suffered their fifth straight loss, 6-4, at the hands of Cleveland Indians and the Red Sox defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-3 in 10 innings at Boston.

In the other National League day game Daryl Spencer batted in the winning run in the last of the ninth for the second straight day as the Giants nipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 at San Francisco.

In two NL night games Milwaukee was at Cincinnati and Pittsburgh at Philadelphia. Walls got his first homer off loser Don Drysdale in the first, another off Roger Craig in the fifth and the third off Ron Nease in the seventh.

The last National League player to drive in eight runs in a game was Milwaukee's Joe Adcock, who did it against the Giants July 19, 1956. The major league record is 12, set by Jim Bottomley of St. Louis in 1929.

There were three other homers in the game: Bobby Thomson got another for Cubs and Charlie Neal and Don Zimmer for Dodgers.

The Cubs scored seven of their runs in a wild fifth inning and held a 14-0 lead at the end of seven. Gene Fodge went the distance for Cubs.

Duke Snider was back with Dodgers after losing a day's pay, $275, for hurting his arm while he and Zimmer were trying to pitch balls over the rim of the Coliseum Wednesday.

seven-hit pitching of knuckleballer Wally Burreite and reliever Tom Gorman with a 12-hit attack against loser Bob Shaw and two other Detroit pitchers. Vic Powers broke out of a slump with a double and a single for three runs for the As.

Chicago got four runs in the fifth inning at Cleveland then were halted by winner Don Mossie. Russ Nixon and Minnie Minoso hit home runs and Chico Carrasquel a two-run double for Cleveland. Jim Wilson was the loser.

At Boston Dick Gernert singled with the bases loaded in the 10th and Gene Stephens, running for Ted Williams, beat by a stride Gene Woodling's throw to the plate. Mike Fornieles went the distance for a seven-hit victory. Billy O'Dell, third Orioles hurler, was the loser.

Hank Sauer hit a two-run homer in the fourth for San Francisco and a solo shot in the sixth. Billy Muffet, brought in the eighth, was charged with the loss. Ray Crone was the winner.

Wants Giants To Go Home

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—True to its tradition as home base for the free-wheeling thinker, San Francisco Monday came up with an anti-Giant crusader on the very day the transplanted major leaguers from New York were being welcomed here with parades, speeches and other glorifying heroics. Michael Grieg, a poet and playwright of sorts, said in a letter to Mayor Christopher he might stand on the sidelines during the parade and shout "Giants, go home."

Grieg branded the Giants "a band of strangers who have nothing better to do than to hit a little ball around land that could be used for far better purpose."

The $15,000,000 San Francisco proposes to spend building the Giants a new stadium, said Grieg, could better be used for schools, library books, higher teacher salaries and maybe even helping out a poet now and then.

Lots Of Surprises Seen In Major League So Far

By JOE REICHLER NEW YORK (AP)—Ten days of major league surprises and disappointments. Probably the biggest surprise has been the splendid showing of three San Francisco rookies Orlando Cepeda, Jim Davenport and Willie Kirkland. The early season hitting and fielding of this trio has improved the Giants by some 50 per cent. The biggest disappointment could be the inefficiency of Chicago White Sox pitching staff, generally conceded to be the best in the majors. SURPRISES Among the happy surprises are Harvey Kuenn's switch from shortstop to center field for Detroit; Herb Score's resurgence from his eye injury of a year ago; Bob Cerv's hitting for Kansas City and the development of the Athletics' Ralph Terry and Jack Urbán into dependable pitchers; Ted Kluszewski's ability to play every day for Pittsburgh without any back pains;

SPORTS FRONT

By PIUS CALLAGHAN

The opening of the baseball season in Los Angeles may be remembered chiefly not for the 78,672 fans that were on hand but for a boner by San Francisco rookie Jim Davenport which prevented the visiting Giants from tying the score in the ninth.

With the Giants trailing 6-4, Davenport led off the ninth with a double off the screen in the Coliseum's short left field. Another rookie, Willie Kirkland, pounded a drive to deep center and Gino Cimoli got his glove on the ball before dropping it as he hit the fence. Davenport, watching the play over his shoulder as he rounded third, missed the bag. He turned back to third but Kirkland was already coming on for a triple, so he continued on toward home and crossed the plate. Third baseman Dick Gray of Los Angeles, who saw Davenport miss the bag, called for the ball to make the putout. Kirkland scored a little later when Willie Mays was safe on Pee Wee Reese's wild throw.

Poor Davenport. He will long remember that opening day in Los Angeles.

When Johnny Logan hit one of Jack Sanford's pitches for a grand slam home run last week, he was "just going for the base hit."

Sanford, the victim of Logan's villainy, felt especially abused. "He swung with one hand" Sanford lamented. But this was nothing new for Logan who often follows through with only one hand.

Henry 'Hank' Aaron is a man of few but generally well chosen words. Asked if he knew that his fourth inning single was the first hit he ever made off Sanford, he replied, "Yeah, but it won't be the last."

That sounds like a fairly safe statement.

They came from near and far for the opener at Los Angeles but this story takes the cake.

One business man who flew his own plane from Phoenix, Arizona, to see the game had to walk 24 blocks afterward to find a taxicab. He figured out it took him less time to fly to Los Angeles from Arizona than it did to get from the ball park to his hotel.

Makes a good yarn, anyway.

Here's a University of Wisconsin pitcher that has certainly attracted the attention of baseball scouts.

George Schmid pitched a perfect game for his college last week as his teammates walloped opposition pitching to win 16-0. The young hurler struck out 18 as he retired 27 straight batters. In the fourth inning he struck out one and in the ninth three; in all other innings he fanned two.

That's not a bad afternoon's work.

Chicago Cubs, who shared the bottom rung in the National League with Pittsburgh Pirates in 1957, certainly have not commenced the 1958 season true to last season's form.

The Windy City boys are really blowing and the rest of the league is feeling the breeze. When we write this column the Chicago squad was sporting a fantastic .714 percentage — something unheard of as far as the Cubs are concerned.

Last time the Cubs got home in front in their circuit was in 1954 and they lost out to the Detroit Tigers four games to three for the world championship. We don't for a moment think the Cubs are headed for any such laurels in 1958 but they are at least, after a week's play, serving notice that they can topple the best of them. They really hung it on the highly-respected St. Louis Cardinals trouncing them in the first four games. The Cards and Musial finally caught up with the Chicago gang in the fifth encounter and Los Angeles Dodgers and Johnny Podres made it two losses in a row for Bob Scheffing's charges.

That looked more like it and nobody was surprised. But Chicago refused to play the part of the losers anymore and Wednesday upset Los Angeles with a thrilling ninth-inning rally made possible by Chuck Tanner's pinch home run and Bobby Thomson's two-run double.

Both Tanner and Thomson are former Milwaukee Braves and may have acquired a taste of the pennant fever while they were with the champions. The Cubs have a couple of great pitchers in Drott and Draw-bowsky and their hitting power hasn't been too bad at all. In the first seven games played (five with the Cards and two with the Dodgers) the Cubs have managed a total of 38 runs or 5.44 runs per game. While they were garnering the 38 the opposition was rolling up a 31 total.

In comparison let's look at the showing of the Cards and Dodgers who are supposed to be the greatest threats to Milwaukee Braves. The Dodgers own a 3-5 record and the Cards standing is 2-5.

The Dodgers in their eight contests of theirs scored 39 runs but saw the opposing teams cross home plate on 53 occasions. 44 of these markers were chalked up by their arch rivals, San Francisco Giants. Chicago Cubs scored the other nine. That means the Dodgers pitching was pounded for 6-7 runs per game, anything but an impressive record for a pitching staff that even the Braves had expressed as top calibre. Don Drysdale, their pride and joy, was hammered all over the lot on the both occasions that he made an appearance. Johnny Podres was able to pick up two of the three victories.

Snider Off And On Payroll As Result Of Horseplay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Duke Snider got in and out of the Dodger doghouse in just 24 hours. After he hurt his right elbow in some horseplay Wednesday, he was ordered off the payroll until in condition to play again. But he lost only one day's pay — for Wednesday night's game — because he was back in the starting lineup Thursday.

Manager Walt Alston said Snider told him Thursday his arm hurt somewhat but he felt he was in condition to play, "so I'm going to let him play." Snider got the elbow injury when he and infielder Don Zimmer engaged in a pre-game contest to see whether they could throw a baseball over the Coliseum rim.

Part Of The Track Scene For Twenty-Eight Years

By JACK SULLIVAN Canadian Press Staff Writer Every morning at 7:30 a jockey in outlandish civilian clothes appears for work at the Fort Erie race track, a bettors' playground in southwestern Ontario near the American border. He's been part of the track scene for 28 of his 48 years and now he's learning why horses run — from an office desk.

Herbie Lindberg — has known only one thing about the track during his well-paid 1930-57 career as a jockey: Climb aboard a steed and head it home over the shortest possible route in the fastest possible time.

He did well in his day, too, averaging more than $10,000 a year around tracks in Canada, the United States and Cuba and switching from jockey to clerk — "just call me an office boy," he says — came a bit hard, but he's far from bitter. Now, with little more than memories, he's one of the hundreds of behind-the-scenes race-track workers.

BORN IN SWEDEN The story of Sweden — born Herbie's life is much the same as many jockeys or, for that matter, athletes who have reached the top to the applause of fans and the big paydays and then tumbled from the easy — come-asy-go days into obscurity. And almost broke.

The sandy-haired little guy who wears bold striped suits, vibrant yellow and green clip — on bowties, multi-colored shirts and shiny pointed shoes, is singularly happy. "I wouldn't change anything if I had to do it all over again," he says.

"Let's look at it this way. I've got a wife and 20-month-old baby and another on the way. I'm making $15 a day, six days a week, for nine months of the year. I'm doing a job I want to do at a place where I want to work — around the track.

"My chances for advancement are good. Now I look up horses' breeding, check on stable colors and do some paper work. Maybe next year I can make $25 or $30 a day as a patrol judge, or padlock judge or clerk of the scales. WENT FIRST CLASS

"Sure, I've made maybe $300,000, but I went first class and it's gone." He never had a drink and never bet a horse. He spent his money on night clubs, clothes, cars. He bought a couple of homes but "everything seemed to go when my first wife divorced me."

Name a big stakes race and Lindberg has been a part of it. He had mounts in the Kentucky Derby in 1943 and 1945 and was out of the money both times. He finished fourth — "by three dirty little noses" — in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in 1947. All told, he has been in four $50,000 handicaps.

He rode the filly Sally Fuller to victory in the 1935 Queen's Plate. "She broke her maiden that race and never won again," he recalls.
