Room For Expansion Seen In N.S. Fishing

HALIFAX (CP) — Michael Knight, Nova Scotia's deputy minister of trade and industry, says the province's "hard, fascinating, and dramatic" fishing industry in future years can double in value to $60,000,000 a year.

He said increasing fishing fleets and climbing prices will double the industry's value, worth $30,844,700 to fishermen in 1962. This was an increase of $26,844,700 in the last 30 years.

Although total fish landings were down to 424,125,000 pounds in 1962 from 436,600,000 in 1961 value increased by $3,831,700.

The Nova Scotia Fishermen's Loan Board, from April, 1961, to December, 1962, approved loans for construction of 35 draggers and trawlers ranging from 92 to 124 feet in length.

Mr. Knight said if each of these boats fished for groundfish and averaged 3,000,000 pounds annually it would increase the yearly catch by "something over 100,000,000 pounds."

The decrease in the 1962 total catch was accounted for mainly by herring, which dropped to 71,000,000 pounds from 95,000,000 in 1961.

One of 1962's top money makers was the lobster. The catch increased by only 65,000 pounds but the value increased $930,000 to $9,691,000. The total catch was 19,847,000 pounds.

Cod showed the most spectacular growth to 95,660,000 pounds in 1962 from 90,160,000 the previous year. The value to fishermen of the 1962 catch was $4,031,000, an increase of $571,000.

Another big earner was haddock when prices more than made up for a drop in the catch. The 1962 catch was down 2,000,000 pounds to 71,162,000 but the value increased over the previous year by $205,000 to $3,549,000.

The most valuable per pound crop among groundfish in 1962 was halibut which brought $1,479,000 for 4,338,700 pounds.

Nova Scotia boatyards worked at capacity in 1962 building new longliners and draggers and are booked far ahead with new orders.

Two Nova Scotia fishing companies ordered construction of five steel trawlers.

U.S. Official Still Hopeful On River Deal

WASHINGTON (CP) — Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said Wednesday failure of the Canadian Parliament to ratify the Columbia River Power Treaty is "a blow, but not necessarily fatal" to the future of the Canadian-U.S. treaty governing the Pacific coast waterway.

He told a press conference that the U.S. can still be justified in adhering to the old terms of the treaty if the Canadian general election produces a government with which the U.S. could complete negotiations within the next six months or so.

He emphasized that his reference to six months is not an ultimatum.

But he said the deeper the U.S. goes into other American power projects with a lower priority, the less basis there will be for sticking to the original treaty terms.

WOULD SPLIT BENEFITS

These terms provide that Canada would build three dams on the Canadian side of the border in British Columbia and that the two countries would split the power produced from the downstream benefits on a 50-50 basis.

Udall said that the U.S. government, in discussions with British Columbia, had been moving close to an agreement on a price to be paid for surplus B.C. power in the U.S. when the political hassle in Ottawa over nuclear weapons brought the Diefenbaker government down.

Udall said that Columbia negotiations with Canada now will be suspended until the outcome of the election because "we really have no one to negotiate with."

Castonguay Is Ready As Always For Vote

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—As always, Nelson Castonguay was ready.

The chief electoral officer had kept the election machinery in motion for months before Tuesday's announcement of the April 8 date by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

As long ago as last fall he had shipped 150 tons of supplies for the enumeration that now will begin on Monday, February 18.

Another 350 tons are ready to go. This includes 40 tons of ballot papers alone, along with thousands of pencils and even blotters and parachutes — the latter for dropping supplies to remote polls in Labrador, up the Saguenay, and in the far north.

Tuesday's official announcement found the 49 year-old chief unperturbed, full of his usual wit and ready to plunge into his fifth election since he succeeded his father in the $17,000-a-year post in 1949.

"I'm not the nervous type," he reminded a reporter.

SENDS TELEGRAMS

He immediately sent telegrams to returning officers informing them of all the pertinent dates, and concluding with a punch line that he paraphrased this way: "Get into business."

That business will cost the treasury nearly $11,000,000. It will involve more than 150,000 election workers across Canada.

For the next 61 days until polling begins, Mr. Castonguay may well be the busiest man in the country. He will keep his office in suburban Eastview working in double shifts, running from 8 a.m. to midnight, with a staff exceeding 100.

Mr. Castonguay will spend about 80 per cent of his time on the phone. Experience indicates he usually has a backlog of 40 calls. Every call is a problem — disputes, interpretations of procedure, troubleshooting.

This is the first time since confederation that a federal general election has been held in April. Mr. Castonguay observed Tuesday. May is the only other month in which elections have not been held.

The bidding:

Opening lead—king of clubs.

Let's say you're declarer at four spades and West leads the king of clubs and continues with a club which you ruff. There is some danger of going down because you may lose a heart and two diamonds in the adverse cards are divided unfavorably.

This being the case, you look for the line of play that offers the best chance of making the contract. One outstanding possibility is that West was dealt the ace of hearts, in which case there is a good chance of making a tenth trick by leading twice towards the K-Q of hearts.

It would not be wise to draw trumps first and then lead a heart. West might have the ace and duck the first heart lead and take the second one, and you would then have no entry to dummy to cash the remaining high heart.

To capitalize on the possibility that West was dealt the ace of hearts, you play a heart at trick three. However, East takes the queen with the ace and returns a club which you ruff.

This is an unfavorable development, of course, but you still have some strings left in your bow. With a little luck you may be able to hold yourself to one diamond loser.

There is no particular reason not to draw trumps now, so you cash the king and play a spade to the ace. Then you lead a low diamond from dummy planning to take a finesse.

When East follows low, you finesse, all right, but with the eight. Much to your satisfaction, the eight draws the king and your troubles are over. The triple finesse (a finesse against three missing high cards) succeeds.

It would not have helped East to play the ten on the diamond lead. You would play the queen, losing to the king, and later trap East's jack by finessing the eight.

Note that directly finessing the queen would defeat you. The advantage of the triple finesse is that it gives you two chances instead of one. It succeeds whenever East has the king or the J-10.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
