Reaction As Varied As Paintings In CIL Collection Displayed Here

Reactions ran the gamut from pleasure to mild puzzlement as over 100 persons milled around Confederation Centre art gallery last evening viewing the gallery's latest collection of paintings.

The occasion was the opening of an exhibition of over 50 paintings from the Canadian Industries Limited Collection which will be on display here until Sept. 6.

If reactions to the exhibition were varied, they mirrored the nature of the collection itself. The exhibition represents top Canadian contemporary painting from coast to coast, and, as explained by W.T.D. Ross, senior vice-president for CIL, who officially opened the show, is not limited to any one school of art.

struction is permitted, leading to high rates of assimilation, dropping-out and emigration to the United States and other provinces among Acadians.

6. The provincial civil service is dominated by English-speaking officials to an extent far surpassing the 63-per-cent proportion of the population that is English-speaking. One brief says that of the 136 top officials in the provincial government, only 21 are French-speaking.

7. Federal government officials in the Maritimes are accused of often refusing to correspond or deal with Acadians in French.

HEAR GRIEVANCES

Most briefs call for establishment of a federal agency to investigate and correct the grievances of minority groups. Federal aid to the French-language university of Moncton is advocated.

The groups being heard today are La Societe Nationale des Acadiens, L'Association des Instituteurs Acadiens, La Societe de l'Assomption, L'Association Acadienne d'Education and L'Association des Professeurs Universitaires de Moncton.

Similar personal briefs were being submitted by Rev. A. L. LaPlante of the faculty of Le College de Bathurst and Herve LeBlanc, a former employee at Dorchester penitentiary near here.

Father LaPlante said Quebec should have a special status within Confederation and the right to secede. He said this right is normal in a true confederation and was long advocated by Nova Scotia in the last century.

La Societe Nationale des Acadiens takes a different view of the separatist movement in Quebec, expressing fear that it will take Quebec becomes a separate state, what will happen to us? (French-Canadians outside Quebec).

Quebec's withdrawal from Confederation would be a heavy blow to our aspirations, which are to see two peoples with different languages and cultures live in harmony.

Attending along with representatives of the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia power commissions were members of the P.E.I. Public Utilities Commission and representatives of the Atlantic Board.

Figures Given On Seal Hunt

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN
OTTAWA — The value of seals caught in the P.E.I. seal fishery in 1964 was $29,900, the Department of Fisheries said this week. In the period 1964 to 1964, seal landings were reported for only three years. In 1958 the value was $15,000 and in 1962 it was $70,200. Figures for 1965 are not yet available.

The department said that 11 small and eight large ships were engaged in sealing in the Gulf in the 1965 season and 50 aircraft sealing licenses were issued for 1965.

In Gulf area 2, there was a quota of 50,000 seals and this was all taken.

There were no foreign ships in the Gulf area in 1965, although there had been four in 1964 and one each in the years 1953 and 1963. There is no nationality requirement for issuance of a sealer's license, with the result the department cannot say if the sealing crews were wholly composed of Canadians.

Last year seal skins were exported to eight countries. The largest number of 25,382 valued at $385,144, went to the United Kingdom.

Yank Crash Mars Paris Air Show

PARIS (AP)—A U.S. air force B-58 Hustler, fastest nuclear bomber in the American arsenal, crashed in flames before thousands of stunned visitors to the international air show at Le Bourget Airport Tuesday.

The pilot of the plane, identified by air force officials as Lt. Col. Charles O. Tubbs, was killed. The two other crew members aboard were injured.

The plane was from the Strategic Air Command base at Little Rock, Ark.

The crash occurred only an hour and a half after the Soviet Union had captured major attention at the show by unveiling a huge turbine-propeller transport plane that Russian engineers claim can carry more than 700 passengers.

The big Soviet plane, named Antaeus after a Greek mythological figure, flew from Moscow in five hours. Soviet technicians at Le Bourget gave it an advance buildup as "the plane of the future."

The enormous craft, capable of speeds approaching 500 miles an hour, has a twin-boom tail assembly and four turbo-prop engines, each equipped with counter-rotating propellers.

The U.S. air force is planning a jet transport capable of carrying 700.

The sleek, delta-wing B-58, which can fly at speeds up to 1,300 miles an hour, swept over the air show twice after completing a flight from the United States, then turned on its final approach for a landing.

Suddenly, oily black smoke and bright orange flame boiled up from the end of the runway as the swift plane slammed into the ground only a few feet short of what would have been a safe landing. Among witnesses was U.S. Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen.

OPENS INQUIRY — Air force officials on the scene said the plane apparently landed short and struck the instrument approach beacons at the end of the main north-south runway. An air force board of inquiry opened an immediate investigation.

The crackup of the B-58 was the first accident to mar a Paris air show in four years. The last accident, in 1961, also involved a B-58, which crashed after a fly-past before thousands of spectators. The crew was killed.

The B-58 is a medium bomber manufactured by General Dynamics Corp. It flies at a ceiling of more than 60,000 feet.
