

THE MILLER'S DAUGHTER.

[CONCLUDED.]

'An' ye open not the door,' shouted the villain from without, accompanying his words with the vilest abuse and the fiercest imprecations. 'I'll hack this whelp's limbs to pieces with my knife, and then burn the mill over your head. 'Twill be a merry blaze I trow.'

'I put my trust in God,' replied the dauntless girl; never shall ye set foot within these walls whilst I have life to prevent ye.'

The ruffian laid the infant for a moment on the sward, as he sought about for combustibles wherewith to execute his later threat. In his search he espied, perhaps, the only possible clandestine entrance to the building. It was a large aperture in the wall, communicating with the great wheel and the other machinery of the mill, and was a point entirely unprotected, for the reason that the simple occupants had never supposed it feasible for any one to seek admission through such a dangerous inlet. Elated was this discovery, the ruffian returned to the infant, and, tying the hands of the little innocent, threw it on the ground even as the butcher will fling a lamb destined for the slaughter, to await his time for slaying. He then stole back to the aperture, by which he hoped to effect an entrance. All this was unseen by the dauntless girl within.

In the meanwhile her mind was busied with a thousand cogitations. She clearly perceived that no means would be left untried to effect an entrance, and she knew that on the exclusion of her foe depended her own existence. A thought struck her.

'It is Sunday,' she said to herself; the mill never works on the Sabbath, suppose I set it agoing now? It can be seen afar off, and haply my master or some of his neighbors, wondering at the sight, may haste hither to know the cause. A lucky thought,' she exclaimed, 'tis God that has sent it to me!'

No sooner said than done. Being all her life accustomed to mill gear, it was but the work of a moment for her to set the machinery in motion. A brisk breeze which sprang up, as it were, by the special interposition of Providence, at once set the sail flying. The arms of the huge engine whirled around with fearful rapidity; the great wheel revolved on its axle; the smaller gear turned and creaked and groaned, according as they came into action, and the mill was in full operation.

It was that very instant that the ruffian Diether had succeeded in squeezing himself through the aperture in the wall and getting safely lodged in the interior of the great drum wheel. His dismay, however, was indescribable when he began to be whirled about with its rotations and found that all his efforts to but a stop to the powerful machinery which set it in motion, or to extricate himself from his perilous situation, were fruitless. His cries were most appalling; his shrieks were truly fearful; his curses and imprecations were horrible to hear. Hannechen hastened to the spot, and saw him caught like a reptile as he was, in his own trap. It need not be added that she did not liberate him. She knew that he would be more frightened than hurt if he kept within the rotary prison; and she knew also, that unless he attempted to escape there was no danger of his falling out of it, even though he were insensible and inanimate all the while.

In the mean time the wheel went round and round with the ruffian along with it, steadily and unceasingly, too. In vain did he promise the stout hearted girl to work her no harm; in vain did he implore her pity on his helpless condition; in vain did he pray to all the powers of heaven; and adjure all the powers of hell, to his aid. She would not hear or heed him; and unheard and unheeded of them likewise muttering curses, he was whirled round and round in the untiring wheel, until at last feeling and perception failed him, and he saw and heard no more. He fell senseless on the bottom of the engine, but even then his inanimate body continued to be whirled round and round as before, the brave girl not daring to trust to appearances in connexion with such a villain, and being, therefore, afraid to suspend the working of the machinery, or stop the mill gear and tackle from running at their fullest speed.

A loud knocking at the door was shortly after heard, and she hastened thither. It was her master and his family, accompanied by several of their neighbors. The father bore his little boy in his arms; he had cut the cord wherewith the child was tied, but he was unable to obtain any account of the extraordinary circumstances that had occurred from the affrighted innocent.

Hannechen in a few words told all; and then the spirit which had sustained her so long and so well while the emergency lasted forsook her at once as it passed away. She fell senseless into the arms of the miller's oldest son and was with great difficulty restored.

The machinery of the mill was at once stopped, and the inanimate ruffian dragged forth from the great wheel. The other ruffian was brought down from his prison. Both were then bound and sent off to Bonn under a strong escort, and in due course came under the hands of the town executioner.

It was not long until Hannechen became a bride. The bridegroom was the miller's son, who had loved her long and well, but, with a passion previously unrequited. They live thenceforth happily together for many years, and died at a good old age, surrounded by a flourishing family. To the last hour of her life the brave hearted woman would shudder as she told the tale of her danger and her deliverance.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple pure remedies, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own household work for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."

"JOHN WEEKS, Butler, N. Y."

Notice to Contractors.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Wood Islands Works," will be received until SATURDAY, the 9th OCTOBER, for the construction of Works at Woods Islands, P. E. I., according to a plan and specification to be seen on application to Duncan Crawford, Esq., M. P. P., Wood Islands, and from whom forms of Tender can be obtained.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied and signed with their actual signatures.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted bank cheque, equal to five per cent. of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the party declines to enter into a contract when called on to do so, or if he fails to complete the work contracted for. If the tender is not accepted, the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any Tender.
