Sodality Reception At Notre Dame Academy

On December 8, Feast of the Immaculate Conception, the Notre Dame Academy Chapel with its altar imbedded in lights and flowers was once again the scene of a very beautiful and impressive ceremony as thirty-six candidates were received into the Sodality of Our Lady by the Chaplain, Rev. P. F. McDonald.

The Sodality in their school uniforms, and wearing Child of Mary ribbons entered the chapel in solemn procession. This group was led by the Prefect of the High School Sodality, Mary Farmer, who carried the Papal Flag of white and gold, while the candidates who followed were led by the Vice-Prefect, Patricia Wynne, bearing the blue and white Sodality flag.

After the singing of the Ave Maria, the candidates approached the altar rail where they solicited the favor of being received into the Sodality of the Children of Mary and plausibly recited their Act of Consecration. Father McDonald then received the candidates into the Sodality and conferred upon them the indulgence of the Prima Primaria. Each new Sodality then received a diploma of membership.

Plan Christmas Party For Blind

More than 40 blind of Charlottetown, and others from rural areas who are in this city on December 28th, will be guests at the afternoon Christmas Party of the Charlottetown Women's Auxiliary to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The date was announced yesterday by the President of the Auxiliary, Mrs. W. J. P. MacMillan, and the party will be held in the Clover Club, adjoining the Canadian Legion. Entertainment will be given in keeping with the Christmas season, and refreshments will be served.

are open to us, to impress this view upon them and to seek a peaceful solution of existing issues. Although differing on China, Atlee nevertheless promised that British armed forces would continue to fight alongside American and other United Nations forces against the Chinese Communist armies.

Britain and the United States made it plain in the communique they "are ready, as we have been ready, to reach a peaceful settlement of the Korean fighting."

But the announcement stressed any such settlement must be "on the basis of a free and independent Korea" in accordance with United Nations principles.

Informed British diplomats reported the two leaders discussed many courses of action, their two governments could take in the event no peaceful settlement of the Korean fighting is possible.

No firm decisions were taken, they said, because of the uncertainties of the battle situation. Many of the suggestions, it was reported, were based on moves the United Nations might take in the event Gen. MacArthur's forces are forced to withdraw.

Points of Agreement The formal announcement said Truman and Atlee agreed on these points on behalf of their Governments:

1. Economic and military aid to the Communist countries in Southeast Asia will go forward despite the Communist onslaught against Korea.

2. The United States and Britain "will act together with resolution and unity to meet the challenge to peace which recent weeks have made clear to all."

3. "We are in complete agreement that there can be no thought of appeasement or of rewarding aggression, whether in the Far East or elsewhere."

4. Although both Nationalist China and the Chinese Communist regime are reluctant to let the United Nations consider Formosa's future, "consideration of this question by the United Nations will contribute to peace and security."

5. The United States opposes and continues to oppose admission of Red China to the United Nations while Britain "considers its (the Red Chinese) representatives should occupy China's seat."

6. "Every effort" must be made to end the Korean fighting by peaceful means but only "on the basis of a free and independent Korea. If the Chinese on their side display any evidence of a similar attitude, we are hopeful that the cause of peace can be upheld."

7. If the Chinese Communists reject peaceful negotiation, the United Nations "decide" what to do, with British and American support.

8. The United States and Britain are in "complete agreement" on the need for immediate action by the 12 North Atlantic Pact countries to intensify their defence preparations.

9. The two countries must expand production as quickly as possible and continue to work out arrangements for sharing the defence burden.

10. A supreme commander for the combined North Atlantic armies should be appointed soon. No mention was made of any selection but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's name was considered a foregone conclusion.

11. Some kind of international agreement is needed to make sure each Western country gets the basic raw materials it needs for military and civilian production.

12. The United States and Britain will "do everything we can" to reach a peaceful solution of the East-West split "through whatever channels are open to us."

13. "The President stated that it was his hope that world conditions would never call for the use of the atom bomb. The President told the Prime Minister that it was also his desire to keep the Prime Minister at all times informed of developments which might bring about a change in the situation."

State Secretary Dean Acheson arranged to brief the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the outcome of the talks.

Acheson's trip to the Senate was obviously an administration attempt to pacify Republican critics who have been demanding a full report on any agreements.

Police Probe Theft Of $936

City Police, under the supervision of Police Chief MacArthur are investigating the theft of $936.00 from the Garrison Officers' Mess at the Charlottetown Armouries, which occurred between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. on Thursday.

The loss was reported early that evening by Steward Charles Toole who stated that he had placed the money, which was in two envelopes on the desk in the mess, and had locked the door when he left. Upon his return at 6 o'clock he found the door open and the money missing.

Alterations were being made to the mess at the time and a number of workers were on the premises. Police are investigating each person known to be in the building at the time the money was there, and expect to arrive at a solution to their problem by the process of elimination.

Buoy Dragged 50 Miles By Ship

MONTREAL, Dec. 8—(CP)—Department of Transport men were glad today this end-of-navigation buoy was about over.

A couple of things they had to contend with: A lost duck and a dragged buoy that travelled 50 miles.

Downriver near Batiscan one of the green shore lights turned to white. An inspector was sent there. He found the glass on the light broken and the duck inside the lamp—dead.

Department officials said the duck must have become lost in a snowstorm. It flew smack into the light.

The dragged buoy was one for the books. A ship struck it and the buoy, with its 2,500-pound anchor, became attached to the rudder shoe. The skipper couldn't shake his ship free so he dragged the buoy from Lake St. Peter 50 miles up the St. Lawrence into Montreal.

"Never in the history of navigation has such a thing happened," said Hector Beauchemin, marine agent here. "I have known of buoys dragged a few feet but never 50 miles."

Transport Department boats today were completing the job of picking up 700 buoys that dot the navigation channel between Montreal and Portneuf. All floating lights will be out by tonight. Shore lights will operate as long as navigation between Montreal and Quebec continues.

Carloadings

OTTAWA, Dec. 8—(CP)—Carloadings on Canadian Railways were slightly lower during the week ended Dec. 2 to 81,434 cars, compared with 82,333 cars for the previous week, but were higher than the 77,683 cars for the corresponding week a year ago.

The Bureau of Statistics reported today that increases over the similar period of last year were shown in loadings of grain products, coal, coke, ores, building materials, lumber, gasoline and woodpulp and paper.

Declines were registered in loadings of grain and livestock.

Navy Flier Safe After Forced Landing

YARMOUTH, Me., Dec. 8—(AP)—Lost over the ocean with his fuel supply running out and his compass disabled, a Canadian Navy flier was guided to Maine's coast and made a safe crash-landing in a field here today.

Lieut. Robert C. Bovill, 25, said a United States Air Force radar net and the Civil Aeronautics Administration radio system combined to save his life.

Bovill was unhurt but his two-seater Firely plane was damaged in the belly landing. He was picked up by the Air Force radar screen and "talked" into this area by the Portland C.A.A. tower crew.

Bovill said he became lost after taking off from Halifax on an instrument training flight.

Suggests Memorial To Founder Of Women's Institutes

TORONTO, Dec. (CP)—The newly-elected president of the Women's Institute of Ontario has suggested a suitable memorial be erected at historic Stony Creek in the Niagara Peninsula as a permanent memorial to the Canadian founder of the world-wide women's institutes.

The president, Mrs. R. G. Purcell of Port William, said members of the W. I. cherish the home of founder, Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless as a sanctuary and the mainspring of the international movement.

Mrs. Purcell is the first provincial president of the women's institutes from northwestern Ontario. A native of North Bay, Ont., she spent some years in Collingwood, Ont., then moved to Calgary and taught in Alberta before getting married and settling on an Alberta farm.

Later, she moved to Fort William. Last summer she was one of Ontario's official delegates to the triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World in Copenhagen and was named Ontario's representative to the British Commonwealth Women's Institutes meeting held at Lady Denham College near Oxford, before the Copenhagen conference.

At this time every year members of the Junior Red Cross in the schools throughout Prince Edward Island augment the Crippled Children's Fund by carrying on a sale of calendars. For this year the calendar features a picture of "Bonnie Prince Charlie", son of Princess Elizabeth, who is the Patroness of the Canadian Junior Red Cross. This special sale is just one of the means used by members of the Junior Red Cross to raise money towards the treatment of handicapped children. They usually raise in the vicinity of $2,000.00 a year in various ways for this good work to add to the splendid amounts contributed by the Charlottetown Rotary Club and by the Masons of Montague who hold an annual auction.

Members of the Junior Red Cross at Notre Dame, Model, West Kent, Rochford Square, Prince Street, Queen Square, Parkdale and Spring Park have undertaken to sell some 2,500 of these calendars in the Charlottetown area in the next ten days. To date Rochford Square School is leading, having already sold almost 400 of these calendars with an all-time record having been established by Grade 5 and 6 where almost 250 calendars were sold. Grade 6, "The Owls" at West Kent are the leaders there with the sale of 112 calendars to their credit.

Injured In Street Accident

Mr. R. A. MacPherson, 100 Hillsboro Street, is in the Prince Edward Island Hospital as a result of being struck by an automobile on Fitzroy Street last evening, driven by Mr. F. Larier of Vernon River.

The accident occurred shortly after the conclusion of the hockey game at the Forum, and Mr. Larier was driving west on Fitzroy, towards Weymouth, when he saw a man crossing the road in the middle of the block. He pressed his horn, and at the same time saw a car coming around the corner from Weymouth, on its wrong side of the street.

Mr. Larier swerved left to avoid the oncoming car and struck Mr. MacPherson before he reached the sidewalk on the left hand side of the road. He picked up the victim and was driving him to the hospital when they were stopped by a policeman directing traffic at the corner of Great George and Euston.

Upon seeing the policeman, Mr. MacPherson who was bleeding profusely from a cut above his left eye, left the car to report the accident, and the policeman not knowing anything was wrong waved Mr. Larier into the stream of traffic. Upon hearing of the accident another car was stopped by the officer and Mr. MacPherson was taken to the hospital where he received necessary treatment.

Meanwhile Mr. Larier had driven to the Police Station to report the incident.

LONG DELAY

(Continued from Page 1) It may take several months to get that agreement. Then the Commons and the Senate will have to pass addresses asking the United Kingdom parliament to make the amendment to the constitution, the British North America Act.

Parliament will also have to pass legislation providing for administration of the pensions and for the machinery of collecting contributions.

No decision has yet been reached on how the program will be financed, but some consideration is to be given to a two-percent levy on incomes. This would be collected along with income tax and there would be a ceiling on the amount of individual contributions.

The Federal proposal also included an offer to pay half the cost of $40-a-month pensions to the needy in the 65-69 age group. The provinces would pay half and they might finance their part of the program through an indirect sales tax at the retail level. A committee will study the proposal further.

At present, old-age pensions go only to persons of 70 and over who prove their need through a means test. They get $40 a month—some provinces pay a bit more—with the Federal Government bearing 75 per cent of the cost and the provinces 25 per cent.

Premier Jones Leaves Premier MacNeil of New Brunswick and Premier Jones of Prince Edward Island left for home without raising any particular matters with federal officials. Premier Duplessis of Quebec left the capital Thursday as soon as the conference ended.

Premier Macdonald of Nova Scotia and Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland planned to remain in Ottawa until tomorrow.

Premier Macdonald said he has a number of matters he wishes to discuss with federal authorities. One is assistance to Nova Scotia apple growers who have been tearing up old apple trees and replacing them with new ones. Another involves plans for a bridge across the Strait of Canso.

Premier Smallwood also conferred with various federal officials. He said he met trade minister Howe and discussed the industrial and economic development of Newfoundland.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(CP)—The Canadian dollar was up 1/16 of a cent at a discount of 4 3/4 per cent in terms of United States funds in closing foreign exchange dealings today. The pound sterling was unchanged at $2.90.

Tomorrow's Promise

By Temple Bailey Continued

She did not see Charles again until after the decree was granted and she was a free woman. She met him in the office of his lawyer. She was asking for a lump sum of money in lieu of alimony, so that she might have a gay and gorgeous season in London and in Paris. The lawyer had advised Charles against the change. "As soon as this is spent, she'll be asking for more."

But Charles had agreed to everything. Why not? He would rather pay off now and end things. She was debonair, smiling, called him "Carl," and asked him to lunch with her. When he declined she said, "But there's no reason why you shouldn't. Divorced husbands and wives do, don't they?"

"Perhaps. But I want to get back." "To your ducks and your dog?" "Yes."

"And to the pretty girl I saw you with one afternoon?" "In spite of himself he showed surprise."

"When?" "I was riding in the park and came on a charming scene."

He said stiffly, "I prefer not to talk of it."

"But I want to talk about it. Who is she, Charles?" "Why bring her into it?" "You mean you're ashamed of her?"

With a quick gesture he stopped her. "There is no reason why I should not tell you her name. She is Anne Odway. Her father and mother were divorced some weeks ago and it has broken her heart. If I dared ask her to marry me, I would do it, but I don't dare. For I am tainted with the same brush as her parents."

"You mean you love her?" she asked incredulously. "I am not here to discuss that," he said. "She does not want to marry anyone and I have not seen her since that afternoon in the park."

He left her at that. He had given her what she asked, but she was not satisfied. In three weeks she and Bart would be married and would be off to London on Charles' money. For that was a thing that she had just discovered—the Bart had no money of his own. He had youth, good looks, and was a gorgeous dancer. But she would have to pay for these things if she wanted them. With Charles' money!

On Christmas Day Charles had written to Anne: "Last night as I stood in front of my log fire, the scent of the woodsmoke brought back to me the night when you came to me through the moonlight. How I longed to know what it was that lit the meadow that it was a sacred flame, symbolizing all that was to come after. Perhaps that thought isn't clear, but I am trying to say that there are things we can't explain, but which are as definitely a part of us as the realities of which we moderns talk so much. The moonlight, the stars, the woodsmoke rising, these are all as tangible to you and me who love beauty as are bricks and mortar and sticks and stones to those with less imagination."

And Anne, writing on the same high note, said: "All my world is wonderful because I know that you are in it."

For months their letters went back and forth. Charles was free, but that fact did not change the quality of his friendship with Anne. They were content to share at long distance the ecstasies which belong to those who soar above the earth to skies that reach to far horizons. Charles, swayed by deep emotion as inspired by Anne's belief in him, found his book gaining in depth and strength. And Anne, eager to match his endeavors with her own, planned with Vicky to open a school for the countryside children who needed care while their mothers worked.

"It is going to be such fun. Charles will fit into a trailer and will call for our scholars, take them to the shore, give them picnic lunches and sun baths. We shall teach them swimming and dancing and good manners, as well as the things in books. We shall teach them to be inspired by deep emotion as inspired by Anne's belief in him, found his book gaining in depth and strength. And Anne, eager to match his endeavors with her own, planned with Vicky to open a school for the countryside children who needed care while their mothers worked."

So the months passed. Charles read of Magot in the society columns of the daily papers. She was in London. But there had been no news of her wedding. Charles told himself that it would have been easier for him if she had married. She would thus have put herself out of his life forever.

As for Anne, he knew now what he wanted and he meant to have it. They had drawn out their fine spun theories to a vanishing thread. The time had come for more than theories. The year stretched before them. Years in which Anne must sit by his fire, smile at him across the table, sail with him under the stars, see dawn over the desert. They would travel a bit, then come back to his island. He would go to Anne and make her see it all as she did—that their love had been given them not for frustration but for fulfillment.

He wrote to her that he was coming on the first of May. "I want you for my own, my dearest. We must not let our fears rob us of our future."

When she had read his letter there came to Anne a sense of the futility of a life such as she had never known. He was her own. Margaret belonged to his past. "His present is mine and his future," was the thought that came.

"Inhumanity" Charge Brings Sharp Retort From Churchill

LONDON, Dec. 8—(Reuters)—Winston Churchill stood white-faced and silent with anger in the House of Commons yesterday as uproar followed charges that he was "totally lacking in humanity" towards India and other Asian countries.

The accusation, by Hugh Gaitskell, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was greeted with prolonged and vociferous cheers from Labor members.

Protests by the Conservatives changed to cheers as Churchill, after fighting to control himself for two minutes, retorted: "I should have hesitated a long time before making such a filthy charge."

The incident sprang from an announcement by Gaitskell giving details of the millions of pounds sterling which Britain will release during the next six years to India, Pakistan and Ceylon, under the £1,868,000,000 Colombo Plan for developing southeast Asia.

A total of £246,000,000 will be paid out to these countries from their sterling balances blocked in London during the Second World War.

Churchill said the release of these sterling balances was by no means an agreed matter between the different parties in Parliament. Some consideration should be given to the fact that these debts were incurred for the defence of the countries concerned, he said.

Gaitskell said: "It is well known on the Government side of the House that your attitude to India and the other countries has always been unrealistic and, if I may use the phrase, totally lacking in humanity."

Churchill said Britain had some rights to make counter-claims in view of her immense expenditure during the war.

Gaitskell replied that Britain's interests would not be well served by repudiating debts. These supplies were badly needed in southeast Asia.

Prime Minister Atlee had made it perfectly clear Britain would not put in these counter-claims, he said.

Evacuation

The Fifth Regiment of the U. S. 1st Marine Division, which held the rearward spot as the force withdrew from Hagaru to Koto, had reached Koto safely, the Eighth Army spokesman said.

A United States 10th Corps spokesman who announced the "good progress" against intense small arms fire said two new threats menaced the battered force pulling back from positions around the Changjin reservoir in North-Central Korea.

One danger was a fresh "large" enemy force moving south parallel to the escape trail, apparently trying to get between the break-out column and its objective—the escape port of Hungnam.

The other was a Communist air attack on the Koto air strip at the rear of the column, its only physical link with the outside.

The Corps spokesman gave no details of the air attack.

He was silent on the new location of the column, for security reasons. But he said Friday's action against heavy odds was "successful."
