SPRING TILTED HEELS.

An Arrangement That Makes You Think You are Walking on Air.

A poorly dressed, keen-eyed old man who looked like the typical country tin peddler...

"Now, young man," continued the old man, "I'll show you the springs into the heels of your shoes, and the weight of the foot in walking comes upon these springs...

"Yes, it is one of the things of the age," added the old man. "Anything else would be a profitable business, and I'm working on it now, and some day after the company is organized there will be money in it."

The old man seemed to have great faith in the success of his idea, and he worked happily at the men's shoes. Then he packed his belongings in his bag, thanked the men for the money he had earned and left.

The men who had their shoes fixed all believe in the old man's idea, though they are doubtful as to the success of his stock company. They say the spring lessens the jolting a man gets over the rough pavement and gives quite a little extra elasticity to his walk.

Gastronomic Geometry. In the Massachusetts Institute of Technology the students of architecture have to solve some very elaborate problems in descriptive and analytical geometry...

Weighting a Hair. The delicacy of the scales used in the mint is illustrated in the following, which we take from a contemporary. Perhaps some persons would rather not know how many hairs they possess than to have them weighed.

Tropole's Acquaintance With Deans. Tropole tells us in his autobiography that he was amused by what some of the reviewers wrote of those of his novels of which the scene was laid in Harrodsbury.

Over the pronouncement of the pundits Tropole chuckles. He assures us that for those tales were written he had never met either a bishop or a dean, nor had he met, to his knowledge, any one who had. He knew nothing, practically, of a clergyman of any sort or kind, nor of life in a cathedral city either.

A Last Report. Little Boy: I want you to write me an excuse for being late to school yesterday. Jeweler: Eh? You are not my son. Little Boy: No, but sometimes I had plenty of time to go to school, so I guess the clock you sold her doesn't go right.

GEORGE SACKETT'S CASE. Hoteliers Enjoy a Mild Sensation—One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cures the following citizens of backache and disease.

HOLSTEEN, March 25.—This quiet village is in an uproar of excitement just now over the case of Geo. Sackett, a well known resident. His experience has had many parallels in other places, but nowhere. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him of severe backache and kidney disease of long standing...
