Consistency With a Vengeance.

JUST now, Grit speakers and writers are trying to make a terrible ado about the Franchise Bill passed last session.
They take great credit to themselves for, as they allege, defending the interests of franchise voters! On this particular subject they have been shedding crocodile tears to a wonderful extent. Now, it would be too bad to allow these hypocrites to proceed without bursting their franchise bubble. We all know that an attempt has been made by the Conservatives in this Province to abolish the Legislative Council, and thus save the taxpayers a very considerable sum.
Such a change would naturally give franchise voters a degree of influence which Conservatives believe would be exercised for the common good. But how have these blatant Grits, who wax eloquent about robbing us of the franchise, behaved? They have simply fought against such a scheme, and invented all manner of excuses to keep the power of the ballot in the hands of property holders—those whom, they say, Sir John has favored! They have stig-matized our young men—the franchise voters—as a “floating population,” and boldly declared that it would be unsafe to trust them if the Legislative Council were abolished. They have kept this incubus on the body politic in existence for the purpose of depriving franchise voters of political power. Still they prate about the Franchise Bill! This is “Grit consistency” with a vengeance!

McKINNON & McLEAN,
July 16, '85.

ous, hilarious Indians, all was now silent and deserted. Mr. W. and his sons went home, too startled themselves at the commotion they had stirred up, and the sight they beheld, to even laugh. It was only in after days, when they recalled some of the scenes, they would lie down and roar until the fit was over. W. and his sons will never forget the ludicrous affair. The next morning not an Indian or a canoe was to be seen. It is possible that the Indians still relate the terrible dangers they underwent, and wonder at the nature of the fearful noises which terrified them. Since that time the creek does not seem to be a place of popular resort for Indians.

The Future of the Anglo-Saxon Race.

We are glad to hear from such a typical American as “Adirodack” Murray such warm sentiments in favor of the union of the Anglo-Saxon people as the following, which we clip from his column:

Talk about Imperial Federation as a political device! The prophets had best hurry their utterances, and fix the date too, or the actual fact will be celebrated before the oracle has spoken, and what was to be prediction will be only narrative. Was it really Canon Farrar, an English ecclesiastic, that pronounced that eulogy on the American General the other day, or did the lightning get bewildered under the sea, and spell the name and title of the eulogist wrongly!
And was it in very truth Westminster Abbey where the generous praise was spoken and the solemn pageant held—the great mausoleum where Fame sleepless watch above England's honored dead. The high-rifted oaken rafters beneath which Wordsworth and Nelson, Scott and Wellington sleep, have listened to the praise of Longfellow and Grant—of men born across the sea, beneath another flag. But of the same stock—aye, there's the key that “reads the riddle well.” The English race in many climes, and soon to be under many flags, will still be one. Of one faith, one language, one genius in commerce, one form of liberty, one phase of civilization, fraternal and united in peace and love forever. That's federation in truth; a federation that makes this continent one, and the old mother island one with us, and the islands of the sea and continent shores peopled by those who, like us, went out from her to seek new nests because the nest at home was overfull, and because, perhaps, the old mother pushed us out somewhat roughly. But however we went, or wherever we flew and feed, we never forget, we Anglo-Saxon-American-Canadian-Australian stock, that we were all hatched in an eagle's nest and are eagles ourselves, blood of her blood, bone of her bone, and flesh of her flesh.
How is that for federation?

Free Trade and Protection.

The position of a free trade country in its relation to those who have adopted protection as a national policy, is aptly shown in Lord Salisbury's reply to the deputation of British sugar refiners who waited on him, complaining that as a result of the fiscal laws of the United States and other countries, not only were they deprived of an outlet for their products outside the United Kingdom, but serious inroads had been made even in the home market, thus rendering unproductive the large amount of capital invested in the trade, and throwing out of employment and driving to foreign lands a large number of workmen who would otherwise by their labor build up and strengthen the land of their birth.
The Premier frankly said he could see no remedy. [England's free trade policy made it impossible for her to offer reciprocity to even a nation that was willing to accept it, and she could not retaliate when her goods were shut out of another country, nor even threaten reprisals, by which means, as the minister said, evils like that complained of would speedily be cured. All the comfort that the deputation carried away with them was the expression of a hope that foreign nations would ultimately see their way to abolish duties altogether, a hope, the prospects for the realization of which seem to grow more slender as the years roll on. The fact is the British sugar refiners are very much in the same position as were those of Canada before 1878, and the remedy that brought about the change in the colony would operate with equal efficacy in the mother country.

THE “Myrtle Navy” brand of smoking tobacco has stood the test for over ten years, and during that time it has lost no friend and gained scores of thousands. This lengthened experience shows that it has no passing fashion which has gained it the approval of the public, but its superiority in essential qualities which makes a first-class tobacco.
