

Canadians Impressed By United Kingdom Industry

By HAROLD McRISON

 COVENTRY, England (CP)—Britain is fast dispelling the notion held by some Canadian trade mission members that the United Kingdom industry is slow, inefficient and backward.

As a 3-man tour gathers momentum, one member after another is expressing astonishment at the speed and energy of the beauty of Britain's industrial machine.

On the second day out of London Hugh Crombie of Montreal, president of the Dominion Engineering Company, remarked: "You know that Margam steel plant in Wales was so gleamingly clean that I wondered where I could buy a cigar. The plant is marvelous."

William Perlin of St. John's, Nfld., vice-president of the I. F. Perlin Company, commented after visiting the new British nylon spinning mill at Ponzonoy: "The housekeeping here is extremely efficient."

But there was an impression among the Canadians that Britain is undergoing sacrifices in her drive for world markets.

Many of the houses seen were in need of repairs. Some provincial hotels were far from the standards of London. At Cardiff, capital of Wales, some members were in a hotel in which heat could be obtained only from a coal-fired gas heater.

TOUR MOVES RAPIDLY

The tour left Coventry on Wednesday night for Glasgow in a fast clip. The mission reached Coventry Wednesday night after covering some 300 miles of industrial sites in two days.

Sir William Rootes, British auto industrialist and chairman of the dollar exports council, remarked to a reporter: "This is no holiday—we've got to move at a reasonable speed if we are to see as much of British industry as possible."

Never, he said, had a mission created so much enthusiasm among British manufacturers.

Canada had had a "lot of bad propaganda" in Britain because of talk of unemployment there and restrictions on immigration. Industrialists had been asking "Is Canada really the place to go?"

"This mission is creating more goodwill for Canada in the way of interest and trade than anything that has happened since our troops came over here in the Second World War," Sir William added.

He predicted that many British industrialists will eventually establish plants in Canada, including his own auto firm.
