

NEW TOWN TRANSFORMS MILITARY APPEARANCE OF GANDER AIRPORT

GARDNER, Nfld., (CP)—Near this big international airport an ultra-modern town is springing up where wartime servicemen a few years ago hunted moose and caribou in dense bush.

Gander airport is finally shaking off its military look. Long barracks which housed Canadian, American and British airmen during the war still shelter most of the 4,700 people who directly or indirectly derive their living from 62 transatlantic aircraft stopovers daily. But one by one families are moving to the modern townsite, being built five miles from the airport by the department of transport and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Winding streets have been bulldozed through the practically level forest land, and water mains and sewerage pipes are available to 140 building lots. Fire plugs, many still hidden by trees, pop up all through the area. Already 130 houses have been completed by Central Mortgage, which rents them to transport department employees, and another 65 are being built by private contractors. Within a few years between 700 and 1,000 houses are expected to be ready.

SYSTEMATIC PLANNING

Although some work was carried out in 1952, the program actually started late last year when the department and Central Mortgage took over the development area with systematic planning. They are hoping for more private construction by individuals and airlines. All buildings must be up to the standards of the National Housing Act.

The airport still has much the same appearance as it did during the war, apart from its gradual growth. Barrack buildings serve as hotels, stores, churches and houses. As the new town springs up, these buildings will be torn down. Permanent structures will all be built in the new Elizabeth drive.

Other streets will be named after famous aviators, including Alcock, Brown, Fraser and Balbo.

NEW SCHOOLS, CHURCHES

The federal government will assist the provincial government in establishment of new schools. Money has already been raised for the construction of three new churches.

When the town is completed it will probably be incorporated to run its own affairs. In the meantime the transport department which owns the area looks after all services, including water, sewerage, lights and streets. A paving program will start early next year. About half of the airport employment. Others belong to individual airlines work for the transport department or allied aviation. Most of the airlines have their own social clubs which will eventually move to the townsite.

The new town is two miles from the nearest runway and five miles from the main terminal. On the other side is the trans-Canada highway. Officials say there is room for 5,000 houses in the snug area without a change in plans.

Murray Harbour North

Miss Mabel Auld, Charlottetown spent the week-end of October 9, at Murray Harbor North, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hazen McLure.

Mrs. Willard McClure has returned home after spending the past two weeks with her sister, Mrs. Chester Reynolds and Mr. Reynolds, Murray River.

At a special service of Dedication held in the Murray Harbor North Presbyterian Church Sunday evening, October 3, the new organ was dedicated to the Glory and Praise of God. The service, which was largely attended was conducted by Rev. M. C. Currie who brought an inspiring message from the text, Psalm 100 verse 4, "Enter into his courts with praise." Special selections included a quartet "Sunrise" by Mrs. Nettie Millar, Mrs. Weston Johnston, Mrs. John Clow and Rev. M. C. Currie, a duet "When I Kneel Down To Pray" by Mrs. Weston Johnston and Rev. M. C. Currie and a male chorus "The Church In The Wildwood." Other hymns were "The Lord's My Shepherd," "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," "Glory Be To God The Father," "Pleasant Are Thy Courts Above", and the choir sang as their anthem "Ben-

Little Sands
