Sharp Run On Reserves Seen Before Dollar Peg

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reserves of foreign exchange, after five months of heavy losses, have held their own and even gained slightly since the May 3 devaluation and pegging of the Canadian dollar's exchange rate.

A report issued here by Finance Minister Fleming's office said the official reserves of gold and U.S. dollars edged up by $14,000,000 between May 3 and the end of the month.

The report also said, however, that the reserves dropped by $118,000,000 in the first two days of the month, some of it as a result of transactions entered into in the closing days of April.

For the month as a whole, the exchange reserves fell $102,000,000 to $1,493,000,000 at the end of May.

The report did not elaborate. But the size of the exchange drain in the opening days of the month, following an exchange loss of $114,600,000 in April, indicated the size of the problem facing the government when it decided to peg the dollar's exchange rate at 92½ cents in U.S. funds.

RESERVES SHRANK

From the end of last October —when the reserves hit a record high of $2,110,600,000—until the dollar was pegged, the reserves shrank by $531,800,000 as the government sold U.S. dollars on the exchange market to offset downward pressures on the Canadian dollar's value.

In that period, the dollar's value dropped from around 97 U.S. cents to 95¼—a level it held until the devaluation to 92½ on May 3.

At the time of devaluation, Mr. Fleming said a major factor was the existence of strong international speculation pressing down on the dollar's value.

The exchange rate on the dollar and, indirectly, the size of the exchange reserves, are affected not only by the amount of currency investors to pay for merchandise exports and imports but also by flows of capital in and out of the country.

Under the new policy of pegging the dollar, by rules of the International Monetary Fund, the exchange rate may fluctuate one per cent above or below the 92½-cent par value. For most of the period since May 3 the dollar has been below that par, at times approaching the maximum one-per-cent limit of variation.

Psychologists Hold Meeting

HAMILTON (CP) — When women try to usurp the role of their husbands, their marriages usually go down the drain, the Canadian Psychological Association was told here.

Peter Sartoris, a graduate psychologist of the University of Alberta said emancipationists and advocates of a matriarchal society usually make "lousy wives" because of conflicts with mens drives and desires.

He said marriage and motherhood are still the basic desires of women.

Another psychologist said Quebec's separationist movement is based on a fear of integration with the rest of the nation.

John Partington said separatist claims that they are motivated by religious, racial, and ethnic convictions, are just talk. They have banded together because they all talk the same language, he said.

Mr. Partington said he bases his opinions on a study of 255 French and English adults in Windsor, London and Montreal, which showed there was no real cleavage between French and other Canadians.

Opening lead—four of diamonds.

The race for the establishment of tricks is a distinguishing feature of notrump contracts. Given enough time, each side would usually be able to develop and win more tricks than it actually does in the ordinary course of events.

For example, in this hand, where South starts with eight tricks —a spade, two hearts and five clubs—he would have no trouble taking ten tricks if there was some way to get the opponents to cash the A-K of diamonds immediately. This would develop two diamond tricks, which South does not have ready-made, and would make life easy for him.

But the defense in this hand, if it functions correctly, can win the race against time and defeat the contract. Let's say West leads a diamond and dummy plays the queen. East taking the ace. The purpose of the queen play is to induce East to return a diamond towards the 9-3 in dummy, which East might be reluctant to do if the queen remained in dummy.

But East, if he is smart, does not return a diamond. He views the queen play with suspicion and returns the three of spades instead. It is not hard for East to figure out from the lead of the four, presumably West's fourth best, that West started with exactly four diamonds and that, hence, declarer also started with four diamonds.

The shift to spades defeats the contract. South cannot do better than play the six, whereupon West takes the king and returns a spade. East ducks, of course, and South is forced to play the ace. Declarer can now cash eight tricks, but then he is finished.

Finding declarer with only two spades may be looked upon as a lucky break by East, but actually, it is quite reasonable from the bidding.

Since South has four diamonds and opened the bidding with a club, it seems likely the club bid was based on a five-card suit. Declarer's other four cards figure to be divided 2-2, which means he has exactly two spades.

Bank Of England Ordered To Release Part Of Cache

LONDON (AP)—The Bank of England has been authorized release of part of the huge special deposits it was ordered to cache at the height of Britain's credit squeeze last wjuly.

The deposits had the effect of taking about £333,200,000 ($713,-302,000) out of circulation.

The relaxation will pump about £70,000,000 back into the British economy.

The news was received with a cheer on the floor of the London Stock Exchange. Trading has opened cautiously, with dealers waiting to see what would happen in Wall Street after the Memorial Day holiday.

"Prices looked a bit lower," one jobber said. "My guess is that it will be a day of just ticking over and waiting for the word from Wall Street."

After one day of bust and another of boom following the New York price collapse, British brokers regarded the bank announcement as an indication that Britain's economic difficulties are easing.

With the pound under pressure last July, Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd ordered a number of belt tightening measures which, among other things, raised the bank lending rate to seven per cent. It has since been reduced to 4½ per cent.

At the same time, Lloyd ordered clearing banks in England to deposit two per cent of their assets at the bank of England. Scottish banks were obliged to make a 1½-per-cent deposit.

The bank of England announcement said half of these special deposits in the case of English banks and one-third in the case of Scottish banks would be released—"with the approval of the chancellor of the exchequer."

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
