when legislation is adopted. Both the former federation and association favored opting for compulsory arbitration, rather than the right to strike, under the new legislation. Mr. Edwards proposed that under the bargaining system each of the more than 60 occupational units determine its own option for either strike rights or arbitration. Besides Mr. Edwards, who is from London, Ont., delegates elected: executive vice-presidents W. A. New Public Service Alliance To Seek CLC Affiliation

OTTAWA (CP)—The 115,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada voted at its founding convention here to seek affiliation with the Canadian Labor Congress.

The alliance, which merges the former Civil Service Federation and its 14 national affiliates with the Civil Service Association, became a legal entity earlier Wednesday.

The former 33,000-member CSA had voted against CLC affiliation.

The application, if accepted, would make the alliance the second largest affiliate within the national labor organization. Only the United Steelworkers of America, with 125,000 members, would be larger.

The CLC now has about 1,300,000 members.

Joseph Morris, CLC executive vice-president, addressed the convention prior to the affiliation vote. He told the 239 delegates that affiliation would be "to our mutual advantage."

The alliance would benefit from the experience of the congress in collective bargaining and from its training facilities.

Selected President Claude Edwards, newly elected president of the alliance, said there is no room in the organization's philosophy for an attitude of "the public be damned."

He made no reference to Canadian postal workers who currently are threatening to strike over rates of pay.

"A sense and knowledge of our acquired power does not require the constant flexing of muscles and neurotic desire for heading battle and blood-letting at every opportunity," he said.

The alliance took its big step to unity July 9 when representatives of the organizations involved signed a merger agreement. Since then each group has obtained ratification from its membership and provisional officers worked out final details.

The biggest problem ahead—and the main reason for the merger—is the start of collective bargaining in the federal public service, likely next year.
