Historic Inkerman, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lawson, has been the setting for many lovely family and social gatherings. On Monday last, another pleasant event was added to the list. This was the afternoon garden party given by the Royal Edward Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, in honor of three of its members who are leaving to take up residence in other Canadian cities. This afternoon at the Summer

Measure of Faith
The Finnish poet, Runeberg, in one of his poems, tells of the difficult battle of a peasant couple to win a living from their mountain homestead. Their harvest the first year was destroyed by flood, hail and frost. To keep alive, they had to mix bark with the little grain they had salvaged to eat. After a promising season the second year things went wrong and the harvest again was lost. They had to double the portion of bark mixed with the grain. Their harvest the third year, however, was a huge success. The wife joyfully exclaimed: "Now we can throw away the bark meals and use the rye flour only." But her husband took her hand and said, "We must still mix the bark with our flour, for the frost has destroyed our neighbor's grain field." The reality of our faith is measured by our concern for others. It was a burning concern for others which led a group of consecrated men to organize the great British and Foreign Bible Society more than a century and a half ago. They were willing to work and sacrifice that all men might have the Word of God in their own language. Since that early beginning the Society has experienced phenomenal growth and in cooperation with associate groups has distributed many millions of copies of the Scriptures in almost 1200 languages and dialects.

We show our concern for others as we contribute to the Society through one of our island branches. We also help when we make a purchase at the Bible House, where is stocked a wide variety of Bibles, books, religious literature, mottoes, plaques, hymn books and religious novelties. You are invited to visit:

ON FORGIVENESS
Those whose faith in God and in His Son Jesus Christ leads to compliance with the terms of the new covenant in the Saviour's blood are forgiven of past sins and promised eternal life. Only God (through the merits of Christ's blood and righteousness) forgives sins. Thus, Christ's ability while on earth to pardon the sinful illustrated that He is Deity and supreme authority—that He is God! No human being can, therefore, forgive men of their wrong doings. Forgiveness comes neither from sacramental magic nor from mystical experience apart from the concrete provisions of God's perfect Word. Rather, men are forgiven when they have appropriated the power of the living Christ through obedience from their hearts to "that form of doctrine which was delivered you" (Romans 6:17). God's Word teaches that such obedience is expressed through faith in Christ, repentance, confession of Christ as God's Son, immersion in the name of Father, Son and Holy Spirit for the forgiveness of sins and thereafter abiding in the Son of God.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Many Pleasant Memories Of A Recent "Fair" Week

Leaving the antique shop with a fond backward look, we caught a ride uptown with folks of a farm. Strangers to us they were—a couple neither young nor old, with a bright and pretty young miss of an only daughter who had had "a close look at the Queen." They farm not as we do at Alderley with a more and less mixed program which includes horses and cattle, mamma-pigs and sheep, the cat fowls, the cats, pup, and a goat but along that specialized and busy line which is market—gardening. This takes in too products of the cook's art—bonnie leaves and rolls and sweets and the like to be we could appreciate manna to some housewife, who holding a varied role in the home has little time from office or other daily employment to make the delectable home-cook her family once enjoyed.

What a leisurely spell of once being ours that day, with only a tryst of six o'clock to be kept in mind of the Fair. Our bifocals held together of late with a thread and as one of the family noted "a black one at that" were repinned in gold. Mack's glasses too, having suffered a dropped lens were also repaired while we waited. The gowns—how pretty—and more trim now the styles. A hat? We did try on one in passing. And in the act caught a glimpse of the changing leaves of Autumn and its colors flowing in a flood of shades along field and woodland and hill. And the hours spent themselves most interestingly until it was time to return to the Fair grounds.

Presently as we walked, we fell into step with a city woman, a friend—a little lady, a business girl of once, always with the thought of others in mind. In a heart-warming gesture though we doubt that she herself noticed it, she extended her walk past her home to "come a piece" with us after a fashion of years gone, almost to the gate which admitted us to Fair and family again.

What nice memories come back to us out of the Fair Week as we go these days about the quiet round of our cares. Along moonlit aisles this Saturday goes leaving with us the pause of the week-end. In mind now, we see the Church spires gleaming white against the Sunday-blue, calling the folks to worship. Shall we not remember of Sunday and indeed every day that dawns for us, with Katherine L. Ramsdell the thoughts expressed so nicely in her verses "This Day is Mine to Live."

"This day is mine to live—A treasured thing! O may I use it well, Always remembering That once it slips beyond The setting sun, I cannot bring it back For tasks I've left undone. This day is mine to live—And if it brings A touch of happiness To give its moments wings, Then may I pass it on With gladsome heart, Assured that in this day I've owned a blessed part. This day is mine to live—Its golden hours Are mine to waste, or spend In increased powers; As talents managed well, O may I bring, These hours back to God, A far more precious thing!"

Until Monday — Diary—Good night.
