Easter Monday Production Proves Gay Entertainment

The St. Charles Auxiliary of the Charlottetown Hospital held its annual Easter Monday play at the Basilica Recreation Centre, last night presenting a three-act comedy, "I Like It Here," produced and directed by Art MacLean.

The story is about a New England family, the Merrivethers and the problems between Mr. and Mrs. and their daughter, Laura, as Mattilda Merrivether tries to railroad her daughter into marrying a young political candidate, David Bellow and push out her real love, Brad Monroe. The play is acted by the Merrivethers' hireman, a European immigrant, Willie Kringle, whose persistent attempts at helping the family solve its differences result in hilarious results.

This year, ring-master Bob Bennett will introduce more than 10 acts which are made up of almost 300 people, ranging from boy acts to seniors. The circus is designed to provide all the entertainment of a real circus. Clowns, a circus band, ring acts, tumbling, dog and tramping acts are but a few of the things planned for the entertainment of the Y club house.

Big 'Y' Credits Key For It's Improved Play

TOBACCO (CP)—Hockey is generally considered a young man's game. But Toronto Maple Leafs, most venerable collection of players in the National Hockey League, are rapidly disproving the adage.

Also urged was "a carefully planned advertising and promotional campaign for Island seed and table-top potatoes to supplement and strengthen the proposed program of organized marketing."

There was little opposition to any of the resolution clauses with five hands raised against being the strongest, and that divided to one dissenter in one case, and to none in another with the predominant feeling of the huge assembly gathering momentum as the play moved forward.

MONEY SAVED
Mr. Burge had told the meeting of the "agreed charges" which the Potato Marketing Board has arranged with the railway.

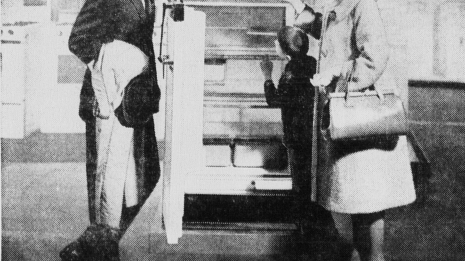

Leo P. Molsaege whose resignation recently as vice-chairman of the marketing board sparked the action leading to yesterday's meeting, was one of the more than two dozen speakers who voiced their opinion prior to adoption of the resolution in North America.

Edison Drake, chairman of the crop insurance agency expanded his view of the system of grain and potato insurance.
