

The Daily Examiner

OCTOBER 21, 1885.

ST. JOHN REDEEMED.

The result of the election in St. John yesterday, furnishes to the people of Canada the most serious ground for reflection. The Metropolitan County of New Brunswick, which was carried in 1878 and 1882 by the Grit party, has now elected a Liberal-Conservative candidate by a sweeping majority. The figures are as follows:—

1885.

Everett (Con.)..... 2968

Tuck (Con.)..... 1864

Majority..... 1104

1882.

Everett (Con.)..... 1925

Tuck (Con.)..... 1864

Majority..... 61

The great increase in the number of votes polled yesterday over the returns of 1882 may be partly due to the unusual interest taken in the contest, but the main cause of the increased vote is the operations of the new Franchise Act passed recently by the Local Legislature of New Brunswick. It is the manner in which about a thousand young men and poor men—who, for the first time, exercised the right of voting—have thrown their weight, which clothes the election with such mighty significance. The Conservative candidate polled 1043 more votes than he did in 1882, while the Grit candidate has been only 133. Nearly the whole of the men lately enfranchised have cast their votes in favor of the Government of Sir John Macdonald! With this commentary on the effect of an enlarged Franchise on the strength of parties, it is not hard to understand why the Grits resorted to such desperate means to obstruct the passage of the Dominion Franchise Act last session. There is little reason to doubt that what has occurred in St. John will happen in 1887 in a number of the constituencies of the larger Provinces, where the new Franchise Act has conferred electoral privileges for the first time on an important class of the population.

The result of this election is also very important, because it administers a telling rebuke to the false policy submitted to the electors by Mr. McLeod and the organs supporting him. The Grit press and speakers in St. John tried to persuade the electors that Reciprocal Free Trade with the United States could be consummated at any time at the will of the Government of Canada. This contention was simply a continuation of the cry raised in the House of Commons in 1884 and 1885, by the silly and dishonest motion on Reciprocity, made by our representative, Mr. L. H. Davies. Mr. Weldon and Mr. McLeod and their organ in St. John, just like Mr. Davies and the Patriot here, deliberately ignored the facts of the case and presumed on the ignorance of the electors. They can now ruminate advantageously over the rebuke they have received, and learn, if not too late, to be a little more honest and frank in future discussions.

The feelings of the Hon. Edward Blake, over the elections in Antigonish and St. John, can be better understood than described. Both these constituencies returned, by large majorities, supporters of Mr. Blake at the elections of 1878 and 1882. They have now withdrawn their confidence from him in a manner at once unmistakable and decisive. In one case a seat formerly held by a supporter of the Opposition, is now filled by a Cabinet minister, while in the other case, the seat held by a leading member of the MacKenzie Administration, is won by a strong supporter of Sir John Macdonald.

A carriage road is to be built from Jerusalem to the ruins made at Jericho by the blast of Joshua's ramshorns. A small modern village stands near the ruins, which are sunk 1,200 feet below the sea's level, in a valley extremely hot, but well watered. Near the road, as proposed, is a monastery, at the very cave in which Elijah is said to have been fed by the ravens. The monastery is literally hung on the edge of the precipice, and a few Greek monks live like birds perched on the edge of a nest in this singular abode, to which a chapel nestled on a rock is attached.

The fall of exchanges and the low price of silver are stimulating the exportation of wheat from India. Enormous shipments are pending. Vessels have already been chartered for shipment of 1,000,000 tons before January.

One hundred thousand persons sought admission to St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, on Wednesday, to view the remains of Cardinal McCloskey. Over 5,000 were turned away when the doors were closed at night.

The sum of $1,175 was paid by the Kilmacnock Museum at Edinburgh for the original manuscript of Burns' "Tam O'Shanter."

The Fitzpatrick Murder.

THE INQUEST RESUMED.

Examination of Beales and Smith before the Stipendiary Magistrate.

The inquest was last evening, at 7 o'clock, resumed by Coroner McLeod and Jury, in the Stipendiary Magistrate's Court room. The following evidence was taken:—

HENRY SMITH, (Sworn)—I went out to Fitzpatrick's about 2.30 o'clock, on Saturday, with Mr. Beales. I went into the room, where the boy was in bed, alone at first, I spoke to him and he got up. When I went in I said, "Well, my boy, where were you shot?" He said, pointing to two different places. "Here and here. Then I asked him where he was when he was shot. He said across the road, or just across the road. I cannot say which. Then I came out. These were all the questions I asked him as far as I remember. Mr. Beales and I went in together. The other men who were there had gone in the meantime. I said, after laying my hand on his face, "Do you know who shot you, my boy?" He said two men in a cart. I said what sort of a horse had they? He said a big brown horse. Then I said do you know Frank Beales. He said yes. I said did he shoot you. He said no. I did not see him yesterday. That was all I asked him. At first I was two or three minutes alone with the boy. The men who were outside while I was in the room with the boy were truckmen, named Yeo and Worth. I did not speak to the boy about making a charge against any person. The boy's mother was not in the room at all while I was there. The mother did not express a wish to go in with me. I had no other conversation with the boy before Mr. Beales went in except the above. Before I went out I heard Beales' son was accused of the shooting, and I said to Mr. Beales we better go out and get the facts. I think while we were there I did all the talking. I am quite satisfied in my own mind that I did not know Mr. Beales. I don't think Mr. Beales asked any questions of the boy.

CHARLES SAUNDERS (sworn)—I was with John N. Campbell, on Lower Malpeque Road, between four and five o'clock on Friday evening last. We met two young fellows on the road, in a wagon. Mr. Campbell asked me if those were not Jos. Mahgr's boys, and I said no; that was Mr. Beales' son driving. I know Beales to see him. The reason I knew him I thought I knew the horse and wagon. The horse was black and the wagon a light express. I did not notice anything in the wagon except the two boys. I don't know Mrs. McGeachern, of West River. We met a good many, but I didn't know any of them. We met the boys a little on this side of Hon. Mr. Weldon's farm, but I can't swear it was Beales in the wagon. I thought it was by the horse. The seat was pretty well forward. It was a low-backed wagon. I did not notice how the boys were dressed. The boy who was driving had dark clothes on. I did not take notice how the other was dressed. I do not remember seeing any carriage before we met them. I do not remember meeting a boy and a woman. I think I met a woman in a single seated wagon, with a Mackintosh cloak on. This was at McGill's, after we turned. I don't think I met two men in a cart between Mr. Davies' and Charlottetown. There were horses, wagons and carts on the road. I did not take notice of them. I was watching the load ahead of me on the road. The boys drove in was, I think, a double seated wagon, with the back seat taken out. A boy jumped on our wagon, but after reaching the turn at Elliott's, he crossed the field, and landed again McGill's. He had a gun with him which was loaded.

MARY JANE RODD (sworn)—I left town with my little boy George a little after four o'clock on Friday evening last. We went out Spruce Park Road and came on the Lower Malpeque Road. There were no carriages along with us. We got a cart at Mr. House's. Mr. Archibald McKinnon, a young woman whom I thought was his daughter, were in the cart. We also passed a woman walking on the side of the road. She had a can in one hand and a basket in the other. I thought it was Mrs. Smith, of North River, but she did not look up. We got to Mallett's about five o'clock. We were not driving fast. Two boys were a short distance from the road, and Fitzpatrick's when we passed. Just as we got to Douse's Bridge we heard a gun fired down Fitzpatrick's way. There was a flock of crows there, and the gun was fired on the crows from the opposite direction from the way they intended. When we were about to turn the corner, a little after the shot was fired, I turned around and saw a woman, with two young men sitting on the seat, driving towards us. They turned up Holman's Road, so my little boy said, but when I saw them they had not come to Holman's Road. They had a kind of a dark horse. I would not swear to a color. I know nothing of the boys' appearance, nor of the style of wagon they had. I do not remember where I passed Mrs. Smith. I did not hear of the shooting until Saturday morning. There was nothing peculiar about the sound of the gun which was fired first. We called at Mr. Mallett's. After leaving Mallett's I do not remember of meeting any teams.

To the Foreman—I did not speak to the boys when we passed Fitzpatrick's. I would not swear that I saw the parties in the wagon were the boys, married or single. They were males. I was not close enough to tell whether or not they had whiskers.

The Foreman asked:—It has been reported to the jury that a dark horse went to your place last night. Has any one spoke to you about the murder?

Witness—There was no one speaking to me about the murder last night. There was no black horse at our place last night. We talked to a great many about the murder. Most every one is talking about it.

Foreman—When you passed Fitzpatrick's, did you not ask the boy if he was shot?

Witness—I did not speak to the boy as I passed Fitzpatrick's.

GEORGE RODD (sworn)—I am twelve years old. I was in town with my mother on Friday, and we left town about four o'clock. When near the bridge by Mr. Adams' we heard a shot fired right behind us. I did not look behind when I heard the shot fired. I looked round just at the turn of the road to North River Bridge. I saw a wagon coming, the horse trotting. Two men were in the wagon. I was not near enough to know them. They turned up the road that leads to the upper Malpeque Road. It was a low express wagon they had, and a dark horse. I do not know whether they were men or boys. I saw no other vehicle when I looked back. I then went back to Mallett's with my mother. I saw no other carriages go by while there, nor did I pass us from Mallett's to North River Bridge. I do not remember if we met any. If they were my own boys in the wagon I could not be able to tell who they were. I could tell whether they had whiskers or not. My mother told me the City Marshall wanted me here. I did not talk to anybody about the case. I thought it was a double seated wagon with the back seat taken out. It looked like a low express wagon, but I could not swear to it. I thought the shot was fired at the crows. I did not notice anything about the shot. I heard about the accident on Saturday evening. I heard no cry after the shooting.

Questions put by Foreman of the Jury—Did any one speak to you about the murder Saturday night? No. Did a black horse stop at your house last night? No.

MRS. RODD (sworn)—We did not speak of the murder till after we heard of the death of the boy. Then George said he saw the wagon with the men turn up the cross road, and that the wagon was like his grandfather's. I heard no cry. I talked over the matter after with my brother. The Jury then adjourned until this evening at 7 o'clock.

The examination of Francis Beales and Arthur Smith, charged with the murder of the boy Joseph Fitzpatrick, was commenced before the Stipendiary Magistrate this forenoon. Hon. W. W. Sullivan appeared on behalf of the crown and L. H. Davies, Esq., Q. C., appeared for the prisoners. The court room was crowded during the examination.

would be with me, and would see the carriage going along. I asked the boy if he knew the person who fired at him. He said he did not, but that it was the biggest of the two. In speaking of the parties who shot him he used the word "men" sometimes. He also said the parties were in a cart and had a big brown horse. He said they were dressed in grey.

MARIA FITZPATRICK, mother of the deceased, (sworn)—Examined by Attorney-General—The first part of her evidence was also the same as that given before the Coroner's inquest, and published yesterday. She said that Joseph said it was the biggest of the two fired the gun. He said they had grey clothes on. I could not say that I would know Smith and Beales if I saw them before me, but that I used to be talking to them passing the road. I would know the horse and wagon. I did not see the horse or wagon the day of the murder, as I was away from home. The boy (deceased) was between eighteen months and two years, at Mr. Holroyd's, and Miss Holroyd used to teach him, giving him a lesson every day and on Sunday. He had no other teaching than this.

Cross-examined by Mr. Davies.—I often taught him myself, and talked to him about God and a place of punishment. He seemed to know all about them. He told me it was a big brown horse the parties had who fired at him. As far as I heard him, he said they had a cart and were walking the horse when he saw them first. I heard my son saying he was often with Beales boy down about the shore. When they would pass Joe would shout out their names!

DR. JENKINS (sworn)—Gave evidence the same as before the Coroner.

DR. CONROY (sworn)—In addition to his previous evidence, said: "On my visit on Saturday night, I told Dr. Jenkins in a low tone, when the boy was in a stupor that he was done." His mother came over to the bed and I told her in a low tone that he was dying. The tears started in her eyes, but no noise was made. I did not tell the boy he was dying, because he was in such a listless, apathetic state, not caring whether he lived or died, and not realizing his position. Any answers he made I considered quite rational, but I don't think he was very particular as to their correctness as he was kind of worried.

The Court adjourned at 1 o'clock to meet again at 2.30 p. m.
