School Of Music At Montague

A school for rural church organists and assistants, ministers, choir singers and others interested, was conducted at Trinity United Church, Montague, by Rev. Lewis M. Murray, Kensington, on Thursday, Nov. 4. The afternoon session opened with prayer by Rev. J. M. Fraser, Montague, after which he welcomed Rev. Mr. Murray who took charge of the session. Introductions showed the following attendance:

Rev. L. M. Murray, Kensington; Rev. J. M. Fraser, Montague; Mrs. (Rev.) J. M. Fraser, Montague; Mrs. Dr. L. A. Johnston Mrs. Archie Hume, Mrs. Dan MacDonald, organists and assistants, Montague United; Mrs. W. A. Bruce, organist Valleyfield United; Mrs. Harry Butler, organist Peters Road Presbyterian; Mrs Galt Murray, choir member Orwell-St. Andrews; Mrs. Higginbotham, Mrs. Wightman, Mrs. Doug Coffin, Mrs. A. Mosher, Miss Mary Martin, Miss Brehaut, choir member Trinity, Montague.

A paper by Rev. Mr. Murray "Church music versus music in church" brought forth interesting discussion, and made clear that sincerity is the basis of church music. Music in church might be something merely added for pleasure, drawing attention to the lovely voice and music, whereas church music should function religiously, draw attention to the message, and produce an attitude of worship.

Rev. Mr. Murray then led the group in the study of unfamiliar tunes. He also gave helpful blackboard instruction, after which other problems in the choir were discussed Supper in the A. D. MacKenzie Hall was enjoyed when box lunches were shared tea being provided by Montague members.

There was an attendance of about forty persons at the evening session with added representation from Sturgeon, Millview and more choir members from Valleyfield, Montague and interested persons in the vicinity. The session opened with a music appreciation period conducted by Rev. Mr. Murray, assisted by Mr George Nicholson, Montague.

Those in attendance were thrilled as they listened to the recordings of great music, and stood while the last record "The Hallelujah Chorus" from the "Messiah" by Handel was played. Rev. Mr. Murray gave a brief sketch of the life of the great composer, G. F. Handel, also brought several other interesting facts to the attention of those present, as the period proceeded.

In a talk "Our faith expressed in our hymns" Mr. Murray stressed the importance of singing, remarking that it links us with other generations, as we note the date of some of the hymns we sing. Let us sing with conviction he said, with the heart. We sing our faith. As we approach the Christmas season we deal with theology, in the hymns we sing.

Another period was then spent in learning new tunes, a real choir practice. This was followed by a discussion on hymn festivals. In this connection a committee was appointed namely, Mr King, Sturgeon; Mrs. A. Hume, Montague; Mrs. W. A. Bruce, Valleyfield.

The hospitality of the Montague friends was appreciated at the close of the session, when tea was again served in the A. D. MacKenzie Hall. Remarks were made by the pastor, Rev. J. M Fraser, and the thanks of the school expressed by the directors of the Montague Trinity choirs. Mr. Gordon Coffin, to Rev. Mr Murray. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. A. C. Fraser, Valleyfield.

Yorston, president of St. David's Association felt that the people of the Island were fortunate in having a man of Mr. MacDonald's understanding and Christian forbearance as their Minister of Health and Welfare. He commended the excellent work done by the Dept., in giving aid to so many. He also urged his listeners to receive an annual check-up on their health, not only for their own sakes, but for those in contact with them. Mr. Seymour Knight made some appreciative remarks and quoted for his audience an appropriate verse from his excellent memory.

TV Policy May Be Reviewed If Recommendations Are Carried Out

OTTAWA, (CP)—Federal television policy will be reviewed next year if the government accepts a recommendation made in 1951 by the royal commission on arts, letters and science.

The commission recommended that an independent commission be established within three years of the start of regular broadcasting by the CBC to take a new look at Canadian television. Regular television broadcasting was inaugurated in Toronto and Montreal in September, 1952.

Reports are circulating here that the government has accepted the Massey commission recommendation. This would mean that the independent body would begin its review early next year.

However, Revenue Minister McCann, who reports to Parliament for the CBC, says the question of establishing an independent investigating body is not being considered at the present time.

HAVE TWO REQUESTS

If a commission is established private television broadcasters are expected to make two demands. They likely will urge establishment of an independent body to license and regulate television broadcasting and that private broadcasters be permitted to operate in areas reserved for the CBC.

Private broadcasters have been waging a campaign for several years for an independent regulatory body. They say the CBC should not control broadcasting either in the radio or television fields because the publicly-owned corporation competes with private stations for business and audience.

However, the Massey commission said the demand for an independent regulatory body is based "on a false assumption that broadcasting in Canada is an industry." It said it regards broadcasting as a service which should be directed and controlled in the public interest by a body responsible to Parliament, and recommended that this body should continue to be the CBC.

Under current television policy Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Halifax areas are reserved for the CBC. The CBC is prohibited from establishing stations in cities where private broadcasters are licensed.

RICH RESERVES

The private broadcasters want the right to operate stations in the areas reserved for the CBC because they are rich sources of advertising revenue. They also say establishment of private stations would provide alternative television sources in these areas and stimulate Canadian television.

However, there is no indication that the government is prepared at the present time to change current policy.
