

SAFE SOOTHING SATISFYING

Originated by an Old Family Physician in 1810.

You can safely trust what time has indorsed for nearly a century.

There is not a medicine in use today which possesses the confidence of the public to so great an extent as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. For more than eighty years it has stood upon its own merits, and its efficacy has been proved by the fact that in the state where it originated the sale of it is steadily increasing.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

I, S. JOHNSON, Esq., My Dear Sir—Fifty years ago this month, your father, Dr. Johnson, called at my store and left me some Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, which he had used since. I can most truly say that it has maintained its high standard and popularity from that time to this.

JOHN B. RAND, North Waterford, Maine, Jan. 1896.

Parsons' Pills

"Best Liver Pill Made."

This certifies that Dr. A. Johnson, whose name is signed to every genuine bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, in the month of March, 1896, has used Parsons' Pills, and has supplied my customers with it ever since, (especially those suffering from the same).

DR. BALL

BY THE DUCHESS.

To say the bishop was astounded would be to say little. He was so amazed that he leaned back in his chair and for some minutes was incapable of an answer. Then he said, "I have a distaste about fortune hunters, and his duty as a guardian, and Dulecia's wealth, and her general impracticability. When he had got so far he paused, and looked at the curate, as if for a further lead. But Mr. Ball was sorely in want of a lead himself. He was, in fact, frightened out of his life. It seemed such presumption to sit there and argue with his bishop, and what was he to say? Silence was impossible with the bishop sitting there staring at him in expectant impatience; and he could not help but utter some words unbidden rose to them.

"She is such a very good girl," he murmured in a dull, heavy tone, hardly knowing what he said. "Could anything be tamer, more meaningless? He felt his cause was lost.

"Yes, yes, no doubt," said his lordship, testily, somewhat put out by the bishop's reply, "but I have had a good opportunity of sifting her character so far, as she has absolutely refused to let me see her. I told her to hear you speak of her so favorably."

Again he paused, and looked expectantly at the doctor, who felt the blood mounting to his brow. Oh, for the tongue of a Demosthenes to sing his dear girl's praises! It was done, and his very breath dried up as he parched lips. Yet speak he must.

"I never met so good a girl," he stammered again, in the same heavy, impressive, and somewhat put out tone. "The fact that she is so admirable a girl as you describe her proves to me that there is all the more reason why I should feel myself bound, as her guardian, to look after her interests and shield her from all harm—from fortune hunters especially. And this Mr.—ah—Wygram seems to me nothing better than one of that class."

Then he looked once more questioningly at Dr. Ball, as though defying him to take up the cudgels here. It was a piercing look, this time, and utterly wrecked the small remaining wit of the poor little curate still possessed. He sank deeper into his chair, and thought longingly of the fate of Korah.

"He is such a good young man," he said, at last, not feebly, as one might imagine, but with more than ordinary confidence, and with a certain air of finality. "But why did Dulecia choose a broken reed like him to be her lover's advocate? Oh, where were the chosen, honeyed words he had rehearsed in secret for this fatal interview? He sat covered with self-reproach, a sight to be pitied.

"Eh?" said the bishop, with a start, stirring uneasily in his chair. Something in his companion's and his persistent praise seemed to rebuke him. Here was a man who thought of nothing but the grandeur of moral worth—who looked upon position, wealth, social standing, as dross in comparison with it. He, the bishop of the diocese—who should be an example to his flock—sitting here, dealing altogether in worldly topics, such as the worth of money, was brought to bay by a poor curate who was mildly but righteously insisting on the worth of goodness.

"You know him intimately, of course," said the bishop, after a short pause, alluding to Gerald Wygram. "You can give me an honest sketch of him as he appears to you. I have faith in your judgment; you have seen much of him, no doubt. As guardian to Miss Vane, I am desirous of looking well into both sides of the question. Her happiness should be a first consideration. Now, leaning one elbow on the table and looking floodily at the devoted curate, "give me your exact opinion of this young man."

A deadly silence followed. Now or never, the unfortunate curate felt, was his moment in which to break into laudatory phrases about Dulecia's lover. But none would come. He opened his lips; he tried to focus his thoughts. In vain!

"I think I never met so good a young man," he said, in a tone so solemn that might have come from the dead. To the bishop the sound was earnest, to Dr. Ball it meant despair.

"Indeed!" indeed, said the former, who was fond of retort. He said it impatiently, and got up and began to pace the floor. "It is a great responsibility, he said, striding slowly up and down the room. "He—this Mr. Wygram—has a bare skeleton, no prospects; and she has close upon five thousand pounds a year. She ought to marry a title. Her father has been on it, he as good as said so to me just a month before his death. This, that you speak of, is not a thing to be lightly done. But you give me such a high character of Mr. Wygram—you have bestowed, indeed, such unqualified praise on both him and Miss Vane—that you make me hesitate about refusing my consent."

"I believe it would be hard to find two such good young people," he said, at last; and then he covered his face with his hand, and felt that now indeed it was all over, and that he was on the verge of tears.

There was a long silence. Then—"Well, well," said the bishop, "I promise you to think over. Worth, such as you have ascribed to this young man, should count before anything." It really did seem to the bishop that Dr. Ball had uttered unbidden words of commendation about Gerald Wygram. And he had good thing, undoubtedly! That is always something, even nowadays. Yes, I'll think it over. When you return home, Dr. Ball—eh?" "Certainly," returned the curate, "I will not be for some time yet—tell Dulecia from me that I shall come and stay with her at the hall very soon for a day or so, to talk a little over, and that I shall ask Mr. Wygram here to study a little before giving my final decision. Tell her, too,—with a kindly smile directed at the astonished curate—"that it was my heavy praise of Mr. Wygram that induced me to look into a matter that I can not still help considering a little imprudent."

"This will be good news," said the bishop, "my lord," said the curate, finding his voice at last when it was too late. But was it too late?

"I hope it will continue to be good news all her life," said the bishop with a sigh. He knew he would get rid of his guardian duties, and for that very reason was afraid to get rid of her. "But now for another topic," he said, cheerfully, laying his hand on the curate's shoulder. "You know the rector of Drems is dead, and—in fact he offered our little rectory, with an income that quadrupled his own salary. But the doctor struck from him when he mentioned it.

"Nay, my lord," he said; "give it to scrofula

Any doctor will tell you that Professor Hare, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, is one of the highest authorities in the world on the action of drugs. In his last work, speaking of the treatment of scrofula, he says:

"It is hardly necessary to state that cod-liver oil is the best remedy of all. The oil should be given in emulsion, so prepared as to be palatable."

He also says that the hypophosphites should be combined with the oil.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is precisely such a preparation.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure Food, and a properly nourished frame."
