

yards in cities, and vaults in churches, which are vested rights, and cannot be violated without a money equivalent. You must have money to buy justice. The lawyers won't give it for nothing. If you have no money, you must be content with injustice. You may even get men to mourn for money, like the undertakers, or wailing women in the East, who will howl and yell when our friends die, if you only pay them for it.

A CONFIRMED HABIT.—A gentleman of excellent habits, and very amiable disposition, was so unfortunate as to have a wife of very different character—in short, one that would get beastly drunk. Being in company of a few intimate friends, one evening, one of them remarked to him, that if she was his wife—since all other things had failed—he would frighten her in some way so that she would quit; and proposed the following method: that some time, when dead drunk, she should be laid into a box shaped like a coffin, and left in that situation until her drunken fit should be over, and consciousness restored.

A few evenings after, the lady being in a proper state, the plan was put into execution, and after the box lid was properly secured, the party alluded to watched, in turn, to witness the result. About daylight next morning, the watcher hearing a movement, laid himself down beside the box when her ladyship, after bumping her head a few times, was heard to say:

"Bless me! why! where am I?"

The outsider replied, in sepulchral tone: "Madam, you are dead, and in the other world."

A pause ensued; the lady again enquired: "Where are you?"

"Oh, I'm dead too," said he.

"Can you tell me how long I've been dead?"

"About three weeks."

"How long have you been dead?"

"Four months."

"Well, you've been here so much longer than I have, can't you tell me where I can get a little gin?"—Gazette of the Union.

DREADFUL OPERATION.—In Russia, on Easter-day morning, every man literally kisses every man; and the Emperor is represented to have upon one occasion performed 3,500 such amiable and delectable operations before breakfast.

"Does the court understand you to say, Mr. Jones, that you saw the editor of the Augur of Freedom intoxicated?" "Not at all, sir; I merely said that I have seen him frequently so flurried in his mind, that he would undertake to cut out copy with the snuffers, that's all."

C——B—— employed his tailor to make a pair of small clothes, and sent him an old pair as a pattern. When the new ones came home, C—— complained that there was no watch pocket. "I did not think you wanted one," said the tailor: "since I found the pawn ticket of your watch in the old pocket."

A PROMPT REMEDY.—Opie was painting an old beau of fashion. Whenever he thought the painter was touching the mouth, he screwed it up in a most ridiculous manner. Opie, who was a blunt man, said very quietly, "Sir, if you want the mouth left out, I will do it with pleasure."
